WAR OR PEACE PIVOTS ON NAZI REPLY, CHAMBERLAIN DECLARES

DETAIN NAZI LINER, SEND 17 TO QUARANTINE

U. S. Agents Begin Check of Bremen on Surprise Ruling From Washington.

GETS THOROUGH SEARCH

Luxury Ship Ordered Held in N. Y.; Passengers Taken to Ellis Island.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK — Seventeen passengers aboard the North German Lloyd liner Bremen were whisked to Ellis Island for investigation today as federal agents prowled outside decks and the interior, down to the holds, of the luxury liner now held in port by an unexpected ruling from Washington.

Officials at Ellis Island said the group—10 men and seven women—were being detained for the following reasons:

Doubtful status, no immigration visa, physically defective, likely to become public charges.

Keep Identities Secret.

The office of the commissoner of Ellis Island was reluctant to divulge the identities of the passengers who were taken from the Bremen as a score of customs inspectors, alert for anything out of the ordinary, swarmed over the huge ship.

It was learned that examination of the group would be thorough, "more thorough than is possible at the docks" as one immigration official put it.

While three coast guard boats hovered nearby, government men began searching the luxury liner from stem to stern as word came from Washington that the customs service is investigating all ships in ocean commerce prior to granting clearance from American ports.

Unofficially it was pointed out that such ships in time of war might engage in privateering.

"We are searching to see that all cargo, mail and baggage have come ashore," said Assistant Collector Gregory W. O'Keefe. "We are also searching for contraband."

Large quantities of baggage, loaded aboard the German liner during the night were removed from her decks and placed under customs guards on the docks. The baggage was reported as belonging to two groups who boarded the ship, although it was said no passengers would be taken on the trans-Atlantic crossing.

In addition to the group made up of surgeons and doctors, there was another group said to be German sailors from ships stranded near the port of New York.

U. S. Embassy Staff Moving Families From Paris Homes

PARIS—(U.P.)—One hundred and thirty wives and children of members of the United States embassy staff evacuated Paris today.

They moved to hotels in Santi Malo, ancient, walled coastal city 200 miles west of Paris.

Diplomats here believed the European situation was growing worse, because Adolf Hitler, in his message to Premier Edouard Daladier of France, had officially laid claim to Danzig and the Polish corridor, a position from which it would be difficult to withdraw. Poland seemed as determined as ever not to yield, and France and Great Britain were just as determined to fight on Poland's side.

The exodus from Paris coincided with the closing of Europe's frontiers, one by one, and the gradual halting of communications by land, sea and air.

Police and secret agents raided Communist centers in Paris and provincial cities today seizing Communist propaganda, suppressing Communist publications and arresting distributors of Communist tracts.

Mansfield Travelers Undaunted

War Crisis Fails So Far to Upset Plans for Their Trips.

The war crisis in Europe has failed so far to daunt the spirit of Mansfielders who either are in Europe or who plan to go this fall.

And this is despite the fact that the American government has advised and urged its nationals to leave European states as rapidly as possible; that American-bound ships are crowded to capacity, embassies are besieged with requests for assistance in getting passage home, and a number of English ships have had their westward trips cancelled.

Charles McKinley, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKinley, sr., 33 Sherman avenue, is still touring England and Scotland, according to a letter which his parents received this morning, and does not plan to leave Lieth, Scotland, on an America-bound freighter until Sept. 1. There was no indication in the letter, from him written about 10 days ago, that he was concerned about the boat sailing. He left here the latter part of June.

Plan to Sail Sept. 20.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Connors, Marion avenue road, have their passports and passage booked for the Queen Mary which is scheduled to sail from New York Sept. 20. They plan to tour the chateau country of France and Switzerland, and to visit in Paris.

Mrs. Connors said today that they would go if they are permitted. She said they sailed last year when Europe was in the throes of the same sort of crisis, landing in London the day Neville Chamberlain left to sign the Munich pact.

Mrs. Dewey Hoyer, Loudonville, who is in Ipernay, France, expects to sail home on Sept. 1. Mrs. Frank Calver, R. D. 1, Lexington, is on the way over and expects to land in Copenhagen Aug. 31.

The situation for Americans in Europe, however, took on a graver aspect today when the Cunard-White Star line (English) announced cancellation of the westbound trips of the following ships: Brittanic from Havre, Sept. 1; Scythia, from Liverpool, to Boston and New York City, Sept. 1; Alaunia, from Havre to Montreal, which had originally been scheduled for Aug. 25, and then delayed; and the Aurania, from Havre to Montreal, Sept. 1.

ON WARPATH

Rampaging Mansfield Braves Host to Lima Tonight.

Six and a half games out of first place and five from a first division berth in the tightest race in Ohio State league history, the Mansfield Braves meet the Lima Pandas in a "Ladies' Night" game at the Fairground at 8:15 p. m. today with Leon Maloney the probable Mansfield hurler.

Lefty Mosser and Del Leslie hurled the Braves to 12-3 and 7-2 victories in a twin bill in Findlay last night.

The double defeat dropped the Findlay club into third place, a game and a half behind the leading Tiffin Mudhens. The Oilers, who held the league for a month until Saturday night, dropped three out of four games to the Braves in the last two days.

Shows 'Rains Came' Here On Same Day As World Premiere

Mansfield will get its first glimpse of the $2,500,000 picture made from Louis Bromfield's novel, "The Rains Came," Sept. 16 when it begins an engagement at the Ohio theater.

The film opens here simultaneously with the world premiere in New York City, where $2.50 admission prices will prevail.

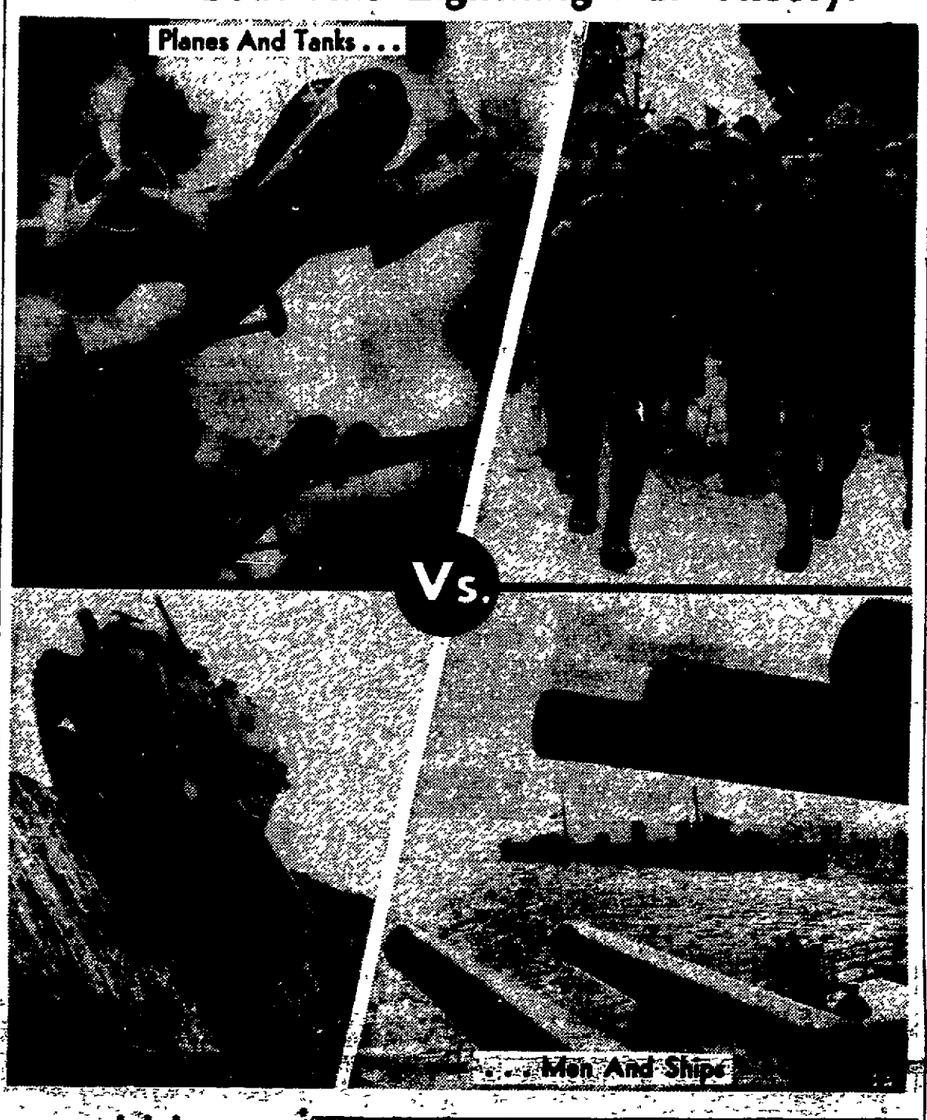
One of the most extravagantly budgeted films ever made, it ranks in this respect with "Gone With the Wind." The flood sequences alone were budgeted at $600,000.

A pictured preview of the film appears in this week's issue of Look magazine. That publication says Hollywood staked $2,500,000 on a newcomer—Brenda Joyce, an unknown, who has one of the two feminine leads. This University of California college girl, who plays Fern Simon, pits her freshness and inexperience against such seasoned screen veterans as Myrna Loy, George Brent and Tyrone Power.

Bromfield, who recently returned from Hollywood, believes with Twentieth Century-Fox that Miss Joyce will be an over-night hit.

The studio constructed an entire Indian city and countryside for "The Rains Came," most of which is destroyed during the flood, earthquake and fire that highlight the story. Bromfield said that the text of his book had been generally adhered to in the film, although there is a "flash" ending which was added for movie purposes.

What About This 'Lightning War' Theory?



SEE BACK-FIRE FOR QUICK K. O.

Experts Doubt Theory's Value, Say Men and Ships Are Still Best Weapons.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
(AP Feature Service Writer)

WASHINGTON—Nine out of ten military experts believe that if a general war breaks out in Europe, Germany will try to deliver a quick knock-out punch to Great Britain.

But those same experts strongly doubt that "lightning" war by Germany would bring Britain to her knees in a hurry. The lightning game can be played both ways.

Since Munich, French and British air forces have been rapidly strengthened. Even conceding numerical superiority to the axis, bombing planes from the democracies would give important industrial cities of Germany and Italy heavy doses of dynamite.

Furthermore, experts say it would be impossible for Germany to swiftly break through the powerful Maginot Line and the No. 1 army of the world.

Germany's tremendous force of bombing planes unquestionably could inflict terrific damage to English shipping and industrial centers. But the English could Chancellor Goes Into Secret Meeting Immediately After Henderson Departs.

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(AP)—Adolf Hitler tonight handed to the British ambassador, Sir Nevile Henderson, the German answer to the British statement of its position toward negotiation of the German-Polish crisis.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Adolf Hitler, in his study at his new chancellery, worked today on one of the most important documents of his career—a reply to a message the British ambassador delivered to him last night.

It had been expected that Sir Nevile Henderson, the British envoy, would fly back to London with the message this morning.

But the hours passed without word. Henderson's plane left Tempelhof airdrome bearing not him but a British foreign office aide who had accompanied him here yesterday.

It had been thought that the plane took some report to London on last night's Hitler-Henderson conference. But Hitler was said to be still working on his reply.

Hitler had been in conference in the early morning hours with his closest confidants.

Henderson's plane, fueled and ready to start, had waited hours for him. The deadline for Henderson's departure, to reach London before the commons met, expired at 11:15 a. m. (5:15 a. m. EDT).

Strictest secrecy was preserved as to the nature of the Hitler message and to the British government message, delivered by Henderson last night, to which it was a reply.

Germans wondered whether the fuehrer's message would now bring the Polish-German dispute to its climax.

Absolutely unconfirmed rumors swept through Berlin this morn-

Sherwood Says Ruling's Near on Request for Leave.

Dispatches from Columbus today said State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood would go to the London prison farm today to confer with Superintendent T. C. Jenkins, former Mansfielder, who last week asked for a six months leave of absence because of ill health.

Sherwood said it was possible he would make a decision on Jenkins' request after the conference.

Meanwhile Raymond McMahon, 23, of Kenton, O., one of four men who escaped from the London farm Aug. 14, was captured at Logansport, Ind., early today by an officer who saw him and another man run into an areaway between two buildings.

The second man escaped and McMahon told police it was Claude (Red) Blood, 37, another of the fugitive convicts.

Britain 'Holds Fast' on Polish Pledge, He Says

Premier Declines To Disclose Details Of Message To Berlin But Informs Commons 'We Will Work And Hope For Peace;' Fleet Ready.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (UP) — The Soviet Union's postponement of ratification of its new non-aggression treaty with Germany was described in Russian sources tonight as a threat to scrap the pact if Germany attacked Poland.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Chamberlain told a tense but cheering house of commons today that Great Britain again had made plain to Adolf Hitler its determination to fulfill its obligations to Poland and added that "the issue of peace or war is still undecided."

"We shall hold fast the line which we have laid down," he declared as the house echoed with tremendous cheering.

"We still will hope and still work for peace," he went on solemnly in a speech of only 16 minutes' duration.

"We will abate no jot of our resolution to hold fast to the lines we have laid down for ourselves."

He also announced the whole of the British fleet was now ready to take up its position in the event of war.

After hearing Chamberlain's statement and speeches in which opposition leaders approved the policy of standing unitedly with Poland against attack, the house adjourned at 3:40 p. m. (9:40 a. m. EST) to meet again next Tuesday, Sept. 5, or earlier if necessary.

Without disclosing the details of the exchange, Chamberlain declared Great Britain had delivered "our final answer" to a communication from Hitler; that "we have made plain that our obligations to Poland will be carried out," and that "at this moment the position is that we are awaiting Hitler's reply."

The prime minister spoke in a firm and assured voice. At times it was almost buoyant such as when he said "at any rate we have not had to begin here by issuing ration cards"—an obvious reference to Germany.

Sound United Front.

The cheering coming from all sides of the house gave evidence of the political unit behind his policy of firmness.

PARIS: Daladier Summons Military Strategists To Parley

BULLETIN

PARIS—(AP)—King Leopold III of the Belgians and Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands were reported today in a quarter close to the French foreign office to have offered their "good offices" for an effort to mediate the German-Polish crisis.

PARIS—(INS)—Premier Edouard Daladier today summoned his military chieftains to a series of important conferences which led to reports in the Paris press of early developments in Europe's crisis.

Among them were General Marie Gustav, chief of staff, and General Maxim Weygand, the World war hero who served as head of a French military mission to Poland in the winter of 1920.

Weygand, who is generally considered France's greatest military strategist, also called upon President Lebrun. The Paris Midi hinted that Weygand was soon to depart on an "important mission," and at the same time rumors of some new negotiation, with King Leopold of Belgium proposed as mediator, flooded the French capital.

The Paris Midi clearly hinted that Weygand's destination would be Warsaw. Many possiblities were thereby suggested. He is immensely popular with the Poles, and would be an excellent choice as an emissary able to discuss possible negotiations with Poland while still, as a military man, emphasizing France's firm determination to aid that nation if attacked.

Of equal importance were the repeated rumors of some direct negotiations between Poland and Germany through the medium of King Leopold. In this connection observers were interested in a call upon Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet by United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt.

ROME: Italians Looking To Duce to Step In and Prevent War

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Italy felt that today would be a decisive one in Europe's history, but retained the serenity she has shown throughout this cisis.

Watching Berlin for the answer to the great question—peace or war—Italians also looked for the answer to Premier Mussolini to step in at the last moment and save peace, in the event the negotiations between the British government and Adolf Hitler broke down.

An informed source said Mussolini had been informed by the Italian embassy at Berlin early today of the contents of the latest British note and had sent Chancellor Hitler a message with his comments upon it.

As reports of pessimism and war preparation came in from other countries, life went on normally here in almost every respect. The people displayed optimism which astounded the few remaining foreigners. It was not because they were uninformed, for the controlled press reported events with unusual objectivity and stressed the situations seriousness.

Other countries closed frontiers and cut off communications, but Italy maintained open frontiers and normal telephone and telegraph service, except with those countries which cut them off.

Railways operated normally. Food shops had their normal supplies. There was no rush to stock up victuals. Theaters were open. Cafes were as busy as ever.

However, a ban on civilian automobile traffic was ordered in Italy beginning next Sunday to conserve gasoline supplies for war use.

Don't Be Unnecessarily Cruel

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For the past sixteen months I have been going with a young man who came from the other side of the country to work here. When he left home he was promised to a girl there and his parents are expecting him to marry her. But he says he doesn't care for her any more, although he does write to her.

He expects to go home this summer to straighten out matters, and then says he is coming back to me a free man. He hasn't actually said it, but I'm sure he loves me as much as I love him. What do you think of this affair?

WONDERING.

Sometimes these long engagements are very binding affairs, and I think if the young man really intends to break with his former sweetheart to marry you, it would be less painful for all parties concerned if he did it by letter. If she knows he is coming home, she would expect to greet a fiance, and then to be told he had crossed the country just to end their engagement seems unnecessarily cruel.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Oddly enough, it was a message from the guards trailing Jack Leslie which was waiting at the door. My father's eyes and mine followed Lillian as she opened the door to Gus, and our ears caught his low-toned summons.

"Hammond is on the telephone, Mrs. Underwood."

"Tell him I'll be there in a few seconds," she said, and when Gus went out, closing the door after him, she brought up her hand in a little salute.

"What shall I tell him, Chief?" she asked.

"Find out whether it is possible for him to remain at the telephone while you come back and report the conversation," he instructed. "I suppose" — this with an ironic little smile—"you would object if I suggested going out there and answering it."

Would Oppose It.

"I should raise a ruckus," she said, and departed on the smiling threat, while my father leaned his back against the seat and put out a feeble hand to me. I came over to him, grasped it eagerly and seated myself beside him.

"She probably guesses," he said with a tired smile, "that while I could walk to that telephone, I am perfectly willing to have her take that message. I must conserve my strength for what may lie in the future."

Again the mysterious sense of hidden menace swept over me, and my fingers tightened involuntarily upon his. He looked at me with eyes that were suddenly comprehending as well as keen.

"I know what you are dreading, my darling," he said, "but I hope you are distressing yourself needlessly. However, if Richard is menaced by any danger, there will be strong forces to aid him. I doubt that any lasting harm can come to him."

Leslie's Car Wrecked.

"Oh! I pray not," I said fervently.

"Amen!" my father responded as solemnly, and then Lillian was in the room again, with her face composed as always but with her eyes alive with excitement.

"Hammond can wait indefinitely," she said. "for just at the present they are at a standstill. They've found the big black sedan wrecked against a big tree."

"Where?" my father demanded laconically.

Lillian shot a quick glance at me.

"Not five miles from the farm," she said.

"Oh!" I exclaimed in alarm, which I could not conceal, at the thought of a malevolent Jack Leslie so near my children.

Farm Guarded.

"Junk the jitters, darling!" Lillian advised easily. "You know the farm is so adequately guarded that he can't even get his nose anywhere near it, although I've no doubt he's crazy enough to try it. But I don't think you need to worry about the children. Noel and Mary, especially Mary, are his targets, and he probably figures that now we've found out the truth about him, we'll rush Mary and Noel down to the farm, where we can guard them better than we can anywhere else."

"As a matter of fact, they can be guarded just as well in that hotel which Noel's father owns as they can be at the farm," my father said, "but it might not be a bad idea to stake them out as goats for the tiger. Don't look so horrified, darling! They will be in no possible danger — we shall see to that—but we really ought to insure Leslie's staying in the vicinity of the farm. It will be much easier to track him down there than it will be in the city."

Can Trust Them.

"I fancy I can trust you and Lillian," I said, "not only to guard Noel and Mary, but to see that their being at the farm does not endanger the children."

I was a bit ashamed of the fear which I thus voiced, but the words semeed forced from me, and Lillian and my father exchanged quick, significant glances.

"You need not fear for the children," my father said with grave finality. "And now, let us go back to the discussion of that wrecked car. Does Hammond think that it is a genuine wreck or a plant? I know you well enough to be sure that you asked him that question."

Jiffy Sweets Are Made Easily

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

JIFFY SWEETS, those concoctions easily made in a minimum of time, are often the most pleasing. If your family has become refrigerator dessert addicts during the warm season, plan to serve them right along. Incidentally, any of these desserts can be made in an ordinary ice box as well as an automatic refrigerator, and they are all magically failure proof.

Cellophane Loaf is as nice as it looks and it looks lovely! Blend together two-thirds cup sweetened condensed milk, four tablespoons raspberry or strawberry jam and one tablespoon lemon juice. Fold in one-half cup heavy cream which has been whipped. Carefully open top of one package cellophone-wrapped cookies and remove all but the bottom cookie. Place a large spoonful of filling on this cookie, add another cookie and press down. Repeat until all are used. Close top of package tightly. Chill in refrigerator 12 hours or longer. When ready to serve, remove paper, slice diagonally. Garnish each serving with whipped cream and maraschino cherry, if desired. Heavy wax paper may be substituted for the cellophane if desired. Serves eight.

Easily Made.

Maple Refrigerator Cake is an easy-to-make delicacy which usually pleases all palates. Thorough blend one and one-third cups of sweetened condensed milk and two-thirds cup maple syrup in a heavy saucepan. Bring to boil over low heat, stirring constantly, about four minutes or until mixture thickens. Cool. Beat one-half cup whipping cream until stiff and fold into mixture. Line narrow, oblong pan with waxed paper. Cover with maple mixture. Add layer of vanilla wafers, alternating in this way until maple mixture is used, finishing with a layer of vanilla wafers. Chill in refrigerator for six hours or longer. To serve, turn out on small platter and carefully remove waxed paper. Cut in slices and serve plain or with whipped cream.

Date and Nut Roll, delicious and healthful, is a quickly-prepared sweet. Thoroughly blend one-half cup sweetened condensed milk in two teaspoons water. Roll eight ounces vanilla wafers to crumbs. Mix with one cup chopped, pitted dates, finely chopped, and one-half cup chopped walnut meats. Add sweetened condensed milk and knead mixture until it is well blended. Shape into roll. Wrap in waxed paper. Chill in refrigerator for 12 hours or longer.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

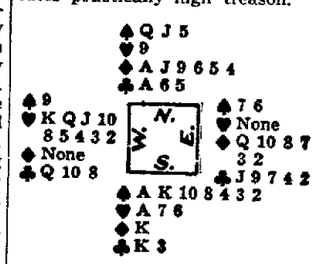
"The Authority on Authorities"

DO AS HE ASKS

WHEN YOUR partner has made a business double of the opponents' suit contract, your job is to do what he probably expects you to do.

If you are not using some kind of artificial conventions, which prescribe certain leads in certain bidding situations, he usually is counting on you to lead either the suit you had bid or the suit he had bid.

Failing to do either of these, and leading a trump instead, constitutes practically high treason.



(Dealer: South Both sides vulnerable).

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable).

What is the best bidding of this deal?

Over South's original bid of 1-Spade here, in a rubber game, West bid 3-Hearts, North 4-Diamonds, East doubled, South bid 4-Hearts as a cue bid, and North called 6-Spades, which East doubled.

West later said that if he had possessed a diamond he would have led that through the suit called in dummy and doubled by his partner, but since he did not he was befuddled.

Under these circumstances, his own heart suit was the correct lead, but he selected a trump. It requires little imagination to see how seven got made, with two trumps drawn, one heart ruffed and one tossed on the diamond ace.

A heart lead would have set the contract by means of two ruffs.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, August 30.

Fairly moderate success may be looked for on this day, although there may be some doubtful conditions to be met with cleverness and precaution. The situation is not a crucial one, but calls for tact and diplomacy. There may be some delays or disappointments of a minor order. Rash and impulsive action would prove a menace. With care and sagacity there are financial benefits in store.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a fairly successful year, with some advancement and benefits. But there also may be some small delays or disappointments. Impetuosity and strife would be perilous. Smooth over difficulties with tact.

Analysis of Improvement Dollar Distribution Shows Nature of Spending.

The installation and repair of heating equipment and material was the major item of expenditure in the largest number of modernization loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration during 1939, it was announced by FHA officials following an analysis of the distribution of the property-improvement dollar.

Exterior painting was the second largest repair item, the report revealed, followed by new roofing and roofing repairs, structural additions or alterations, and other types of improvements.

One-half of the total number of notes insured during the year for modernization work were for amounts of less than $300, while about two-thirds were for less than $400. Three-fourths of the notes were for less than $500.

Repayment of the property improvement loans was made through small payments, as FHA reports show that 70 per cent of the borrowers made monthly payments of less than $15, while 45 per cent made payments of less than $10.

Nonfarm residential property was the chief type in the number of modernization loans, accounting for 89 per cent of the total. Farm property and commercial or industrial property each accounted for 4 per cent of the total loans insured, the remainder being for the purpose of erecting private garages and other minor or nonresidential structures and for the improvement of institutional properties.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. I am planning to put some additional closets in my house. What size should they be?

A. The size and shape of a closet should be suitable to its purpose. Two feet is a satisfactory depth for clothes closets, as a greater depth usually results in waste space. However, the door should be wide enough to allow easy access to each end.

Q. Is it necessary to have gutters and downspouts on a house?

A. Although they are desirable, gutters and downspouts are not a necessity, as a ditch filled with gravel or broken stone for a depth of about 8 inches may be provided under the eaves to catch the dripping from the roof and to prevent splashing of mud against the lower part of walls or the formation of puddles. The grade should be sloped to drain water away from the foundations, and where there is a pitched roof above a door there should be a metal strip on the roof near the eaves turned up so as to deflect water to the sides of the door.

Q. In building a group of houses or apartments, is it good to have a diversity in type of architecture in order to avoid monotony?

A. No. Grouped dwellings should have architectural unity. Each structure should be related to the others in arrangement on the plot so that each unit complements the others. Variety in size may be used to create accents, and various architectural details, so long as they are of the same character, may be used to avoid monotony.

State Luther League Opens Convention Here Friday

2-DAY SESSION TO BRING 500 YOUNG PEOPLE

Finals in State Declamation Contest, Talk by National President on Program.

Finals in the state declamation contest and appearance of the national president will highlight sessions of the State Luther League convention at the First Lutheran church this week-end.

About 500 young people, including 250 delegates, from Lutheran churches throughout the state are expected here for the convention which opens Friday night and concludes Sunday afternoon. "Winning Losers," is the convention theme.

Miss Delores Lorentz will represent First church of Mansfield in the declamation contest finals to be held in conjunction with a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Saturday for the visiting young people. Winners of four conference contests held last spring are to compete. A scholarship to Wittenberg college, Springfield, will go to the winner.

Alvin Schaediger, of Philadelphia, president of the Luther League of America, will address the convention at the opening business session at 9 a. m. Saturday. Election of officers will be held following the banquet Saturday night. A program will be presented by Mansfield talent.

Hear University Head.

Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capitol university, Columbus, will address the first session at 8 p. m. Friday on the subject, "Winning Losers in the Preparation." A choir made up of Luther League members of Mansfield and vicinity, under the direction of J. Fredcrick Wolf, will furnish music for this service. A fellowship supper in the church basement will precede this session.

Following the Saturday morning business session, a program of sports events will be staged for the delegates at Liberty park.

The convention will join in the regular services at the Lutheran church Sunday. For the morning service, Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor, speaks on "Winning Losers In the Race." During the Sunday school hour, a special young people's class will be held with the national president as teacher. Rev. Joseph Frease, director of Religious Education of Young People's work in the Synod of Ohio, will teach the men's class.

Vesper services at 3 p. m. Sunday will bring the convention to a close. Dr. J. Gould Wickey, of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the Board of Education of the United Lutheran church, will be the speaker. His subject will be "Winning Losers In the Reward."

Bricker Dedicates New Building at State Fair Today

COLUMBUS—(AP)—A new junior fair building that cost $160,000 will be presented to the youth of Ohio today by Gov. John W. Bricker.

Making his first appearance at the 89th annual state fair, the executive was scheduled to lead dedicatory ceremonies late in the day and dine with the junior fair board in the club house.

Another matter may occupy the governor during his visit. About 400 exhibitors signed a petition yesterday urging that something be done to correct "the deplorable conditions under which Ohio boys and girls are forced to house their swine exhibits."

More than 700 hogs—twice as many as last year—are being shown at the exposition by youths and all are housed in pens under tents because the swine barn is filled with open class entries, Junior Fair Manager B. P. Sandles said.

Meanwhile, officialls looked gleefully at the attendance figures and predicted that 30,000 would be on hand today. Yesterday's paid attendance totalled 21,782, they said, compared with 18,034 a year ago.

Up and Down THE STREET

It will be one all-star game after another for J. Russell Murphy, former Mansfield high school coach who takes over his new duties as assistant football coach at Cornell university this fall. Murphy is in Chicago with his new boss, Carl Snavely, who is conducting a coaching school, and will remain there for the All-Star football game tomorrow. "Murph" plans to stop in Mansfield Thursday, wait around for the Cleveland All-Star tilt scheduled for next week and then go to New York City for the Gotham's All-Star affair. Then to his new job in Ithaca, N. Y.

The believers in signs are forecasting an early fall. The katy-dids, traditional harbingers of frost, have been chirping nightly for nearly a month and the golden rod is blooming along the highways, much earlier than usual, the prophets point out. Tradition has it that the first frost will occur six weeks after the katy-dids appear. Besides, there has been a succession of cool evenings which indicates chilly weather is just around the corner, the sign believers assert.

If you are one of those individuals who grab for the daily paper to follow the situation in Europe, you're lucky not to be living in Skagway, Alaska. When Miss Marjorie Palmer, superintendent of the Visiting Nurses, returned recently from her Alaskan trip, she brought along a copy of The Alaskan, weekly "paper" published in that Arctic community. It is a small double fold of paper, mimeographed and carrying only the most "local" news. There is no word of the European situation, and the two "headline" stories on the front page deal with a plea for an international highway for the Yukon Territory and the sale of delinquent tax property. "This is the first tax sale since 1929," says the story, "but then almost every property owner in Skagway is behind in his taxes."

Steeplejack John Pearson of Logansport, Ind., had Mansfielders "looking up" to him yesterday afternoon. Hundreds watched as he applied a coat of aluminum paint to the flagpole in Central park that towers well over 100 feet. It was the first time in several years that the pole was given a "new dress" and it only cost $8, Park Superintendent Frank Burton said.

SHORT CAREER?

Tokyo Reports Say New Premier Won't Last Long.

TOKYO — (INS) — Even before announcement of his cabinet membership list, Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, premier-designate, today was seen as headed for a speedy political discard.

Critics of his one-day-old premiership charge that Gen. Abe has no concrete policies, and that his over-numeerous advisors behind the scenes eventually will wreck his government.

It also was pointed out that Abe had practically no administrative experience, save a brief period in the war ministry in 1928.

The premier, it appeared to observers, will be but a figurehead, and will not be able to direct any major changes in foreign policy so long as affairs remain in the hands of the army in China.

ONLY 8 FILE FOR RURAL OFFICES

Flood of Petitions Expected by Election Board Before Deadline Sept. 8.

With only eight nominating petitions filed so far with the county board of elections, little interest has been shown in the dozens of offices to be filled in the county's rural areas at the November election.

The filing deadline is Sept. 8, just 10 days away, and election board officials anticipate a flood of petitions during the final few days before the deadline.

Irwin Hunter of Bloominggrove township had filed today for the county board of education, seeking one of the two posts now held by Lewis L. Rinehart and J. W. Snook whose terms expire this year.

Frank R. Tingley, Olivesburg road, filed his petition for Madison township trustee. Others who have filed for township and village offices include George C. Swanger, Cass township trustee; Edwin B. Lybarger, constable, Sharon township; Gail Haun, clerk, Sharon township; Earl C. Heininger, clerk, Butler village; Milton Wright and Jack Braden, Worthington township trustee.

ACCUSE PASTOR IN 'INSURANCE MURDER' OF HIS DAUGHTER, 18

BULLETIN

CAMDEN, N. J.—(U.P.) — The Rev. Walter Dworecki, Polish Baptist minister, arraigned on a murder charge today, accused of plotting the lover's lane slaying of his 18-year-old daughter, Wanda, to obtain her life insurance, pleaded guilty.

(By United Press)

CAMDEN, N. J.—Rev. Walter Dworecki, 42, Polish Baptist minister, was to be arraigned on a murder charge in police court today, accused of plotting the lover's lane slaying of his attractive daughter, Wanda, 18, to obtain her life insurance.

The actual strangling, police said, was performed by Peter Shewchuk, 21, lanky Chester, Pa., youth.

Prosecutor Samuel P. Orlando announced that Dworecki and Shewchuk confessed to the conspiracy. Shewchuk was promised $100 to carry out the plot, Orlando said, but the money never was paid.

Wanda's battered body was discovered on the morning of Aug. 8, lying in rain-soaked weeds in a lonely South Camden lover's lane. Her mud-splattered dress was adorned with a corsage of roses kept fresh by the all-night downpour.

Apparently grief stricken and near collapse, Dworecki that morning sobbed the story of his daughter's disappearance to police who started a tri-state search for her killer.

The clergyman said Wanda left home to buy a pair of stockings and an ice cream cone and never returned. He told authorities of telephone threats against her life, and gave them what, they said, subsequently proved to be false leads to her "killer."

During the investigation, it was established that Wanda's life was insured for $2,695, with a double indemnity clause, which, if upheld, would pay more than $5,000. It was disclosed also that a $10,000 accident policy on the girl recently had lapsed.

CHIEF JUSTICE CLEARS JURIST OF 'PREJUDICE'

Weygandt Says Evidence to Keep Judge From Inquiry Not Sufficient.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Cleared of a charge of prejudice, Judge Jacob B. Davis will preside when a special grand jury meets at Waverly a week from today to open an investigation into charges of fraudulent voting in Pike county.

Holding that an affidavit of prejudice filed against Judge Davis by Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert was insufficient, Chief Justice Carl V. Waygandt refused late yesterday to remove the Pike county jurist from the bench during the inquiry.

R. Cary Davis, assistant attorney general, said the investigation would open Sept. 5 when a special jury has been ordered to report.

Member of Committee.

Herbert's affidavit of prejudice against the judge was based chiefly on the complaint that Davis was a member of the Pike county Democratic executive committee which recommended appointment of the two Democratic members of the county election board, which was removed recently by Secretary of State Earl Griffith.

Justice Weygandt held, however, that Judge Davis' membership in the committee was insufficient evidence "to indicate probable unwillingness on his part to handle questions coming before him on the law and evidence." The chief justice added that Judge Davis would be expected to so conduct himself throughout the investigation as to shield himself from any future charge of bias or prejudice.

Indicating he did not want to reveal evidence which would be presented to the grand jury, Herbert refused to present to Justice Weygandt affidavits which, he said, indicated that some of the accused persons were close personal or political friends of Judge Davis.

"At the risk of having Judge Davis preside," Herbert told the chief justice, "I will not reveal any more affidavits."

He did present one, from a school teacher identified as a Miss Jones, to the effect that she had been denied a teaching position in the Waverly schools because she would not contribute to a Democratic campaign fund.

PLAN PROGRAM

Public Assistance Officials of 9 Counties Meet Here.

About 25 state and county public assistance officials met today in the Richland county courthouse to consider minor changes in the federal public assistance laws and to map an administration program for the rest of 1939 and 1940.

Heading the discussions were Judge H. J. Robison, Columbus, chief of the Ohio division of public assistance, and John Cortsdafner and Ed. Knaub, of the auditing department of the division of public assistance. Assisting was Mrs. Marian Brucker, Shelby, supervisor of the Mansfield district.

New application forms to be used by county workers were to be described to supervisors and changes in the procedure in filling out blanks were to be outlined by the state officials.

Representatives at the conference were from Richland, Ashland, Crawford, Knox, Morrow, Huron, Erie and Seneca counties.

FAIR ENOUGH!

That Pact Puts Kuhn and Browder In Same Bed Even If They Don't Fancy It

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—There are a couple of details in the military treaty by which Naziism and Communism confessed their identity and their community of interest which should be hung around the necks of both parties and their adherents. In this country it would be nice if Fritz Kuhn and Earl Browder could be produced on the same platform at the same time to receive the Order of the Albatross, but, as that is not just now feasible it will have to be done symbolically.

Browder, it will be remembered, was caught flatfooted by the news of the confession and neither he nor the Communist paper knew the answers until sufficient time had elapsed to permit communication with Moscow.

He and the paper then came out with an excuse as long and about as straight as a ball of string in which they said at one point: "In each and ever nonaggression pact which the Soviet Union concludes there is a basic clause of the Soviet peace policy which provides that in the event that one of the parties invades or commits an act of aggression against a third nation, the other party (the Soviet Union) is not bound to the treaty, is free to act in defense of peace."

Get that, now. Browder and the Communist paper says this is a basic clause of the Soviet peace policy.

But get this, too.

There is no such clause in the Hitler-Stalin confession, and this means that if Germany attacks Poland, as she will, in due time, just as she attacked Czechoslovakia, Stalin doesn't have the right to revoke the treaty. On the contrary, by the conspicuous omission of this basic clause of the Soviet peace policy, Stalin obviously repudiates it.

He gives Hitler an unwritten but, nevertheless, plain assurance that when Germany attacks Poland, Russia will not feel obliged to do anything about it. Just what he will do, they don't say, but from the smell of the deal it may be assumed that he and Hitler will divide Poland between them.

In fact, the second article of the confession of kinship and mutual principles constitutes a gimmick whereby Stalin emphasizes his invitation to Hitler to attack Poland. This article says that if Germany or Russia is attacked by a third power, neither Germany nor Russia will assist the offender. That gives Hitler and Stalin the right to decide between them that Poland was the aggressor when the war comes and to act accordingly.

But the little pet of the document is article four, which says that neither party will associate itself with any other grouping powers which directly or indirectly is aimed at the other.

Now what is the spirit of that one? The spirit of it is that the anti-German boycott is off, and that Browder and Kuhn, in this country, are placed under an obligation to quit needling one another, and that their respective followings, such as they are, must abandon their reasons for political existence. Kuhn exists to combat Bolshevism, or as he and Hitler have been calling it, Jewish Bolshevism. Browder exists to combat Nazi-Fascism. He has said so hundreds of times.

This clause in the treaty says "directly or indirectly." It means that the mock-feud is absolutely off now, and that followers of Hitler and Stalin are obliged to cease nagging and faking and co-operate.

The co-operation is provided for in the trade agreement, and it certainly would be disobedience and traitorous conduct for members of either side here to fail to obey orders.

It may take a little while for Browder and Kuhn to make the turn, and they probably will be allowed some time, in view of the mental peculiarity of the American people who have a disagreeable habit of pointing out inconsistencies. But, as soon as possible, they are obliged to lay off their old program of saving the United States from each other's political vice.

Browder and the Communists mustn't directly or indirectly antagonize the Nazis.

They are comrades now, though it may gall them to realize as much, and the Americans are the winners. The Americans now have the admission of their respective bosses that the whole feud was an act and a fake, that it wasn't a contest to save us from Nazism or Bolshevism, but an attack by one enemy on two fronts against American democracy.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—People and things:

If Margot Stevenson's clothes were as loud as her laugh, everybody on the Warner lot would be wearing dark glasses. . . .

Fred Fredericks, the Factorman on wigs, is doing three for Raymond Massey to wear as "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois"—as a youth, as a rising politician, and as president. . . . Says that Lincoln's hairline receded less than an inch in the 30 years. Which ought to prove that movie magnates, even with all the world on their shoulders, have no right to get bald.

Maureen O'Hara, the new girl ("Jamaica Inn" and "Hunchback of Notre Dame") looks as fresh and unspoiled as that "Wild Irish Rose" of the song.

If Ben Hecht really wrote that "Lady of the Tropics" thing, he must have done it tongue-in-cheek—and at those prices too. . . . I wonder if anybody can tell whether Hedy Lamarr (in the same) is an actress or not. . . . Personally I think it would be a monopoly if she could act too. . . . She'll never need to, for this corner.

"My father," says Robert Cummings, "was a fine man who spent his whole life telling me to tell the truth." . . . And Bob's whole success, on the stage first and then in Hollywood, was built on two nervy deceptions—first in passing himself off as an English juvenile, next in claiming to be a Texan to get a movie break.

This summer has been a record-breaker for numbers of would-be visitors to see how pictures are made . . . Studios in consequence have clamped shut the doors so tightly that a visitor must be somebody extra-special, gala, and deluxe even to peep inside the gates . . . In a few years, however, the demand should drop off considerably . . . With all these out-of-Hollywood "gala premieres"—Dodge City, San Francisco, Van Buren, Ark., New Orleans, Dallas, Waukegan, Ill., and the others—the country is seeing stars . . . And the big location trips around the map are showing the folks the rest of it . . . To name a few: "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" at Eugene, Ore., "Northwest Passage" and "Drums Along the Mohawk" in Idaho, "Arizona" near Tucson . . .

This last, a Wesley Ruggles epic with Jean Arthur, is really starting something, because Columbia is rebuilding the Tucson of 1859, completely and permanently, and will present the results to the state for a museum when the picture's finished . . . Not a scene will be shot in Hollywood . . . At this rate the town will soon be merely a stopover for stars between pictures . . . Look at Dorothy Lamour already . . . That girl must spend a third of her time on location at Catalina island, the best imitation of sarong-land in these parts . . .

Accents are so important . . . Lya Lys, who worked hard at losing hers, had to play a German in "Nazi Spy," a French girl in "The Return of Dr. X," and has another in "The Fighting 69th" . . . Dolly Haas, also shedding an accent, was playing an Austrian girl in "We Are Not Alone" until Jane Bryan, an American, took over the role (Announced reason: Dolly's illness) . . . And then there's Vivien Leigh, who after struggling and struggling to lose that Southern accent so noted in British people had to pick it up again for "Gone With the Wind!"

SPOTTY UMPIRING SAID TO HAVE MARKED SOFTBALL TITLE GAMES.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sport Editor

JUDGING from the comments of witnesses of the Ohio softball finals in Columbus Sunday night, Mansfield's DeLuxe Cabs did not get any of the best in officiating.

This is always an unpleasant matter to discuss, but if the umpires were as incompetant as we have been led to believe then the management of the games should be severely criticized.

With as much at stake as there was in the Columbus games, the umpiring should have been of a type more consistent than we understand was presented.

Questionable officiating left this year's tournament to determine the state's representative in the national play with a "black eye."

It was unfortunate that this had to occur as the finals involved two of the finest softball aggregations ever produced by the state.

Walter Wellman, one of Findlay's premier bowlers, is now in our midst. Word from Bucyrus says that Walter, Ex-Mansfielder Leland Stock's doubles partner last winter, has sold his interest in the Findlay alleys and purchase the pin emporium in the Metropolitan county city. New equipment will be installed in a remodelled building in downtown Bucyrus.

CHANGES SCORING?

NO RADICAL scoring changes in bowling will ever occur, we are satisfied, but Scott H. Engel of Hamilton has a new idea that he is attempting to put into common use.

Under the Engel system, the highest possible score is 200 instead of 300, since the bowler receives credit only for the pins he actually knocks down. Two throws are allowed each frame, regardless of how many pins fall, so it is possible for 20 per frame.

If a strike is not recorded on the first ball, the second ball is used only to take off the standing pins. But if a strike occurs, the pins are respotted.

HERE'S VOTE FOR TED, MEL AND JOE

THIS is the time of year when the boys are beginning to pick their all-star clubs. Anybody can pick one so go ahead.

Recommend for your outfield Ted Williams of the Red Sox, Joe DiMaggio of the Yanks, and Mel Ott of the Giants. The reason was clearly illustrated in yesterday's games.

DiMaggio hit homers No. 21 and 22, the first coming with the bases loaded, and the second with two on, and added a single for good measure. He drove in eight runs as the Yanks bombed the Tigers, 18-2. Not a bad fellow to have on your side.

Now take Mel Ott, and where would the Giants be without him? Sure as shooting his name will be in the baseball hall of fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., when he hangs up his spikes. Yesterday he personally accounted for the Giants' 3-1 victory over the pace-setting Reds. His single in the first scored Moore and then his 27th homer in the fourth with a mate on base wound up the Giants' scoring.

And why take a rookie like Ted Williams? The eighth inning at Cleveland illustrated why. Williams came up with the Red Sox trailing and clouted homer No. 20 with two mates on base to give Boston a 6-5 victory over the Indians. It snapped the Red Sox' five-game losing streak and the Indians' seven-game winning streak.

Harry Denzel Wins Armory Net Title

Harry Denzel won the Armory Singles Tennis Title and Trophy by defeating Henry Chicolani 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, in the finals Sunday. Several of the games went to deuce, one game going 18 points and another 16 points.

In the semi-finals, Denzel defeated Heiser by the score of 7-5, 6-4, and 6-0. While Brown, (last year's champ) forfeited to Chicolani because of illness.

Braves Win Pair From Findlay, Hosts to Lima

Heath Swings At Fan

Cleveland Gardener Punches Grandstand Heckler as Tribe Loses, 6-5.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Jeff Heath, young Cleveland Indian outfielder, was credited with a "hit" today. It won't go into Jeff's official batting record but one heckling spectator knows all about it.

During the ninth inning in the contest with the Boston Red Sox yesterday, won by the Sox, 6 to 5. Heath fouled out with the tying run on base. The heckler who was closest to the "hit" roasted Heath every step of the way to the dugout. He moved into a box next to the dugout to make himself better heard.

Punched On Chest.

The fan leaned over the rail and Heath punched him on the chest. Police led the man away before he could be identified. Heath was sorrowful afterwards.

Jeff Heath

"He had been riding the whole team all day," Heath commented. "It's just another mistake in a season full of them, but that guy was pretty abusive of everybody."

Heath was probably thinking of last Sunday when he was ejected from the game for throwing a bat and later wrestled in the dugout with Pitcher Johnny Broaca.

Not many saw the "hit." Umpire Bill McGowan said he didn't see the blow and would file no report with Will Harridge, presidentof the league.

Said Alva Bradley, team president, who didn't see the action: "We don't intend to take any action in the matter."

The loss snapped a seven-game winning streak for the Tribe and put them one and a half games behind the third place Chicago White Sox.

Ted Decides Game.

Ted Williams, Boston's rookie slugger, was the deciding factor in the contest. In the eighth, he lifted his 20th homer of the season over the fence with two men on the sacks.

Harry Eisenstat took the mound for the Indians today in the last game of the series with Boston and his pitching opposition was Charley Wagner.

Merchants Offered Chance To Avenge Tourney Defeat On Benefit Program Sunday

MANSFIELD softball-goers will witness one of the strongest girls' team in the state at the Fairground Sunday when the Youngstown lassies, 1938 and 1939 state champions, come here to meet the Merchants.

This game will be one of three on the "Darby" Yarman benefit program on tap at the Braves' bailiwick.

This game will offer the Merchants a chance for revenge as the Mansfield team was one of the clubs the Youngstown feminine stars defeated in their march to the title.

Evelyn Jocha, Donna Schuster and Mary Holda, members of the Mansfield team playing with the Akron Goodyears in New York this week, will return in time to play against Youngstown, it was announced today.

The other games on the program will send the American Legion junior club against the old Yuncker Sports and the DeLuxe Cabs, runners-up in the state softball tournament, against the J. & H. club of Massillon.

Admission for the three-star attraction will be 25 cents, Bob Young, chairman of the benefit committee. Tickets may be obtained from him.

Club Bowlers Open Sept. 11

Two New Teams to Be in Field; Champions Return.

Plans to launch the Club handicap bowling league at 6:30 p. m. Monday, Sept. 11, have been completed, Harold Miller, secretary of the league, announced today.

The league will operate under the same rules as last season with few changes in the personnel of the clubs, Miller said.

New clubs in the circuit are the Lumbermens Mutual insurance and Richman Clothing company. The former team will replace the Baku Grotto, while the Richman club will replace the Mansfield Athletic club.

The Commercial Managers, who won the championship last year by a margin of game, have re-entered, Miller stated.

Mix Baseball With Football

Friendly House Athletes Open Heavy Schedule.

A mixture of baseball and football comprise the late summer program at the Friendly House.

The regular junior league baseball schedule has been completed with the Reds the champions with 14 wins in 15 games. A tournament involving the Reds and their rivals got under way at the Columbia Tire field yesterday.

A trophy will be presented to the tournament winner, with the members of the Reds each receiving a miniature gold baseball for annexing the league crown.

Play in the six-man "touch" football league was launched at the Friendly House yesterday. Games are scheduled each evening at 6:30 p. m., Mike Wentz of the Friendly House staff said.

In the first football tussle, the Rams walloped the Panthers, 20 to 14, the winners scoring a touchdown and safety in the final period.

ARROW CABS, NOTICE

The Service Cabs challenge the Arrow Cabs to a three-game series. Gail Lentz, manager of the Service Cabs, can be reached at Dover 2970.

Vander Meer, Humphries and Bagby Fail to Live Up to Expectations This Year.

HERO today, bum tomorrow. How often that phrase is repeated in the world of sports. We recall it for the moment as we consider the hard-luck plight of the 1938 rookie pitching sensations.

Johnny Vander Meer! "What a pitcher! Two no-hit, no-run games in succession.

"Never before and probably never again will it be done. Ace of the Cincinnati Reds."

Today, Vander Meer is just another pitcher on the Reds' hurling staff. He has been undergoing treatment for a sore arm. He won 15 games as a rookie last year but this season he has failed badly and today has only five wins against eight losses.

Other freshmen who failed to hit their stride this year and are back in the minors are Jim Bagby of the Boston Red Sox and Johnny Humphries of the Cleveland Indians.

Newcomers of 1938 who are holding their own again this year are Bob Klinger of Pittsburgh, Tot Pressnell of Brooklyn, Bill Lohrman of the Giants and Joe Kraukaskas of the Senators.

Wins NCO Golf League Title

Possum Run Team Awarded Trophy Last Night.

The Possum Run entry in the NCO Inter-City golf league was awarded the championship trophy at a league meeting held at Coolridge Country club last night.

Although Possum Run galloped through the schedule without a defeat, several matches were not played. Tony Schadek, league president, presented the trophy to Carl Kushin, captain of the Possum team, last night after it was decided that the postponed matches would not be played.

Joe Mayer, youthful Possum club wielder, won individual medal honors for the season. He finished with a par-breaking 69. Carl Kushin won third place with a 75 average.

Glenwood Country club of Ashland finished second in the title race. Officers for the 1940 season will be elected at a meeting next spring.

TEAMS BATTLE TO COP SECOND PLACE IN RACE

With the championship already in the hands of the Richland Printing team, the final matches in The News-Journal Class A golf league at Possum Run today will be highlighted by the fight for second place.

Goldsmith Clothiers and the Mansfield Athletic Supply clubs are tied for the runner-up position with 37 points apiece. Goldsmiths face the Moorhead Garage foursome and the Athletic Supplies meet the Yuncker Sports. The new champions face the Siegenthaler Shoes in the other setto.

Enos Whips Slabaugh In Quarter-Final Tiff.

Bob Enos moved a notch nearer another championship in The News-Journal senior tennis tournament yesterday when he eliminated Waddy Slabaugh, 6-1, 6-3, in quarter-final singles match at the Woodlawn court. Enos and his partner, Bob Spear, annexed the doubles crown last Sunday.

The Campbell-Campbell mixed doubles duo won over Arrow-Spear combination, 7-5, 2-6, 7-5.

Hartnett Shows Rookie Stars a Thing or Two

Gabby Believed to Have Set New Endurance Mark for Catchers as Cubs Triumph, 5-3.

By SID FEDER, Associated Press Sports Writer.

THIS is a piece about an old guy and a bunch of young guys—or are before beauty, in one act.

The youngsters are on the prowl in the big leagues these days—the rookies who have produced and are a cinch to stick, fellows like Charley Keller and Ted Williams, Rip Russell and Merrill May. Sometimes the youngsters look down condescendingly on the old guys, but there's one they have a long way to go to catch.

He's the perennial laughing boy of baseball, garrulous Gabby Hartnett. Gabby hasn't much longer to go in harness. He's staring 40 in the eye, and has been doing his chore behind the plate for the Chicago Cubs these last 17 years. But yesterday he passed another mile-stone that put his name in the record books again.

A Long, Long Time.

The game, itself, didn't amount to much. It was just a Monday outing against the Phillies, which the Cubs figured to win. They did, 5-3. But Gabby had on the mask and pads and the big mitt, and was shaking that ham-like fist for his boys to show fight. That was the 1,721st or 1,722nd game Gabby has been out there with harness draped around his portly frame.

Ray Schalk, the old White Sox workhorse, always was regarded as being "untouchable" in that respect. He was back there in the tough spot with an all-time record of 1,721 games from 1912 through 1928. Until official figures are checked, it won't be decided whether Gabby equalled Ray's record or broke it yesterday, but since the Cubs have 31 more games to play this season, the gabby guy is a cinch to be out in front all by himself before long.

Yesterday an eighth-inning home run by Williams, of the Boston Red Sox, beat the Cleveland Indians 6-5.

Charley Keller collected himself a homer and a brace of singles as the Yankees slaughtered the Detroit Tigers, 18-2. Joe DiMaggio whacked a homer with the bases loaded and another with two aboard.

Rip Russell, another standout freshman, banged out his seventh four-bagger for the Cubs in yesterday's shindig. Then there's Gene Thompson, a valuable help to the Cincinnati Reds' hurling department, despite the tough one he lost yesterday when the Giants clicked, 3-1, with Mel Ott driving in all the New York runs.

This setback didn't take anything away from the Reds' five-game National league lead, however, for the second place Cardinals were stymied by the rawest of the rookies, Al Moran, who made his debut with the Boston Bees a 10-5 pitching triumph.

Tosses Four-Hitter.

Bill Trotter, still a youngster, although not exactly a newcomer, tossed a four-hitter, believe it or not, which paced the St. Louis Browns to a 12-2 decision over the Washington Senators. The Chicago White Sox shoved over a ninth-inning run to nip the Athletics, 5-4 under the arc lights.

Arm In 'Good Shape,' Vander Meer Believes.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(AP)—His reconditioned pitching arm in "good shape," Johnny Vander Meer of the Cincinnati Reds was en route home today after 10 days of treatment here. He was pronounced ready for relief work by Lee Jensen, former baseball trainer, who treated the muscular complication. The hurler planned to join the club in the east after a brief stop in Cincinnati.

Women Guests At Fairground

Lefty Mossor, Del Leslie Lift Tribe Nearer First Place In Tight Ohio League Race.

By OSCAR RUHL

THANKS to some very nifty pitching by Wandell (Lefty) Mossor and Delbert Leslie, Mansfield's revived Braves moved within six and a half games of first place in the tight Ohio State league race by virtue of a double triumph over the faltering Findlay Oilers last night.

The Findlays, who led the wheel for several weeks until last Saturday when they slipped out of the top post and Tiffin moved in front, were trounced twice by the rampaging Braves.

In addition to reducing the distance between their cellar position and first place, the Braves climbed within five games of third place and a half game of fifth place.

Mansfield's advance was permitted as Tiffin and Lima split a double-header.

Hosts to Pandas.

Manager Dewey Stover and his hirelings return to the Fairground tonight for a "Ladies' Night" game which brings the Lima Pandas to the city.

The game is scheduled at 8:15 p. m., and it is likely that Leon Maloney will be on the mound as the Braves attempt to regain fifth place.

"Anky"

Lefty Mossor toiled in the first of the two seven-inning games and left the hillock with a 12 to 3 victory. Leslie took over the pitching chore in the afterpiece and responded with a 7 to 2 triumph to run the Braves' new string of wins to three.

The Braves enjoyed one of their famous big innings in the first game to triumph. Trailing 2 to 0 going into the second, the tribal warriors climbed on May and his successor, Abbott, for eight runs to put the game on the proverbial ice.

The eight-run outburst erased the two runs tallied by the Oilers in the first heat. The Findlay club's only other run came in the sixth. Mossor struck out eight and issued two walks as he set the Oilers down with eight scattered blows.

Dale Leedy, with a homer and double, and Harry Siegbert, who collected a triple and double, and Stover, with a pair of two-baggers, led the 10-hit attack.

Findley again tallied two runs in the first inning of the second game, but the Braves overcome the advantage in the second as they sent four men across the plate.

Never Threaten.

The Oilers never threatened again as the Braves added another run in the third and added to their lead in the fifth with two more tallies.

Leslie turned back Findlay with nine hits, the same number accumulated by the Braves off the delivery of Vasko.

Little Frankie Ankenbrandt wielded the heavy willow in the second tiff. The third baseman obtained three hits and sent four runs scurrying across the plate.

Catcher Charley Wrenn set some kind of a record in reaching first base in last night's games when he got there eight times with four hits, three walks and a hit by pitcher.

Rah, Rah, Braves!

Taper Off for All-Star Game

Pros, Collegians Collide in Chicago Tomorrow.

CHICAGO—(INS)—The first and possibly the best of the year's big time football games began to take the sports spotlight in the mid-west today as a college all-star cleven and the world's pro grid champs, the New York Giants, took final workouts for their clash in Soldier Field tomorrow night. Both squads were reported at top form for the contest, the sixth in a series of games begun in 1934 for charity.

The Giants, who came to Chicago today from their training camp at Superior, Wis., should be at their best when they take the field against the All-Stars before an expected throng of at least 80,000, declared Steve Owen, the champions coach.

Although Head Coach Elmer Layden of Notre Dame, and his string of ace assistant coaches from colleges all over the country, were not making any statements, an air of quiet confidence was evident at the All-Stars' headquarters. The college men, selected in a nationwide poll, as were their coaches, were said to be a stronger aggregation than any of their predecessors, and certainly the squad boasted some of the finest football material the nation produced in 1938.

Jerger Beats Brother To Annex Caddie Title.

Joe Jerger defeated his brother, Lawrence, 7 to 6, in the 36-hole finals yesterday to win the Coolridge Country club Caddy tournament championship. Joe carded a 37 on the second nine to pile up his lead. His brother had a 41.

In the second flight, Virgil Steinmetz, Jake Gaubautz and Paul Dommon tangled in a play-off, with Steinmetz winning the title. He beat Gaubautz, 2 up, and Dommon, 1 up. Nineteen youngsters participated in the tournament.

APOSTOLI HAS CLOSE CALL AGAINST LEE

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Fred Apostoli, middleweight champion of the world, today held a victory over Glenn Lee in a 10-round scuffle, but it was moans and groans and not cheers which met the judges' decision last night. Apostoli, who had twice thrilled local fans with fierce fights against Billy Conn, eked out but a narrow win.

BETTY M., PETER PAN WIN AT STATE FAIR

COLUMBUS —(INS)— A 2-year-old pace and the 2:17 trot were on the harness-racing schedule at the State fair today as victories were marked up to Betty M. Stardrift and Peter Patch.

Betty M, driven by Roy Line, of LaPorte, Ind., won the 2:20 pace in straight heats while Stardrift, driven by Clint Dodgins, Cleveland, duplicated her feat in the 2:21 trot. Peter Patch, driven by Wayne Smort, Delaware, had little trouble in taking the 2:13 trot in straight heats.

'Cards Haven't Got a Chance'

McKechnie's Certain Reds Will Beat St. Louis.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds may be stumbling along at .500 ball on their last road trip, but take it from William B. McKechnie, he doesn't think the Cardinals have much chance of catching up.

"They have to win at least five out of the six games to be played between us," commented the skipper as his crew bowed before the Giants yesterday, 3 to 1.

"I don't think St. Louis has a chance of doing that," he added, "for in Derringer and Walters I have two of the best clutch pitchers in the game.

"We're winning ball games with late rallies, coming from behind," he snapped, "shaky and worried teams don't do that."

That cleared up everything for the day except what to do about Mel Ott and Bill Lohrman.

The Giant outfielder singled in a run in the first inning and his 27th homer in the fourth with a man on base supplied the rest of the Terrymen tallies. Lohrman blanked the Reds until the ninth when three singles saved them from a shutout. The other four safeties he allowed were kept scattered.

Sad Ernie Lombardi, who can't figure out his current hitting slump, was struck by a batted ball and forced to retire from the game.

"I guess it just isn't my year," groaned Ernesto.

Whitey Moore will be hurling for his 13th victory for the "rubber" game of the series against Harry Gumbert for the Giants today.

WILLIE RUSSELL WINS

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Willie Russell, Columbus lightweight today held a 10-round victory over Frankie Gilmore, Cincinnati, in the weekly boxing card. Gilmore was on the canvas twice.

THEATERS

THOUSANDS of protests to the contrary, "Grapes of Wrath" will be made into a film. There are rumors afloat in Hollywood that 20th Century-Fox merely bought the novel to suppress it, paying $70,000 for the privilege. But at the moment the screen play has been written and Henry Fonda has been selected for the role of Tom Joad. Fruit Growers association in California resent it bitterly and term it the rankest libel, while there are plenty of people who agree with the author, Steinbeck, that it is a true picture of the way the "Oakies" were treated in southern California. After the vile language of the Oakies is deleted, it is a moving and terrible story. Darryl Zanuck says he'll make it regardless of whose toes it steps on.

Popular Magazine Story.

"These Glamour Girls" was one of the fictional hits of the season when it was published in Cosmopolitan magazine, and now it comes to the screen with Lew Ayers and Lana Turner in top billing. Miss Turner plays a taxi dancer who invades the sacred portals of dear old Kingsford university when Lew Ayers goes on a spree and invites her to the traditional and exclusive week-end house party. This is a college story without a cheer leader or fullback to its name. It opens at the Ohio tomorrow and runs through Friday.

The Dionnes Star.

"Five of a Kind" would very naturally refer to the Dionne quintuplets and in this, their third full length feature, they are the main attraction. Running concurrently with their cute antics is a story of a runaway heiress, a New York radio commentator and a newspaperwoman who fight each other to the draw on a scoop about the quints. Cesar Romero and Claire Trevor, with Jean Hersholt and Slim Summerville, head the cast. "Stagecoach" is a stirring picture of a stagecoach journey in the days when the Indians constituted a constant menace. John Wayne is a stalwart westerner and Claire Trevor is the lady with a shady past and present.

Spirit of England.

"Cavalcade," written by English Dramatist Noel Coward and telling in pictorial pageant the history of England from the Boer war up to 1932, which has just been re-issued, is more appropriate now that it was when it was filmed. It tells of how British men and women have met the tragedies of war and of national disaster, only to emerge stronger than ever in their devotion to their nation. The lives of two families are depicted and England's courage is reflected in them. The picture is a Park theater attraction, with "Should a Girl Marry?" also on the bill.

Trial Speedboat Run Proves Fatal

DETROIT—(INS)—Joe Schaefer, owner and driver of the Gold Cup speedboat Delphine XI, died today of injuries sustained yesterday when his craft overturned and sank in the Detroit river on a trial run. Mechanic Ed Mackenzie was only bruised in the accident.

The Delphine, formerly owned by Horace Dodge, was making better than 100 miles per hour when the craft swerved to port, bounded out of the water and sank, carrying both men with it. Schaefer was unconscious when he came to the surface.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—For the first time in 30 years the North Randall race track today was without its annual Grand Circuit harness race program. J. Bedford French, trustee of the Cleveland Jockey club, said the races would not be held Sept. 16-20. The club is under reorganization.

Examine this table. It shows that $1.12 weekly ($4.46 a month) repays everything on a $100 loan in 30 months. The faster you pay, the less the total cost. These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2% monthly on balances up to $300 and 6% yearly on balances over $300 to $500. These rates are less than legal maximum, and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign—no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives.

MARKET STEPS UP FRACTIONS TO TWO POINTS

Cheering Business Notes Spur Stocks Despite Conflicting Reports From Europe.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Wall Street put a few modest bets on European peace today and the stock market stepped up fractions to around 2 points.

Although sentiment seemed to have improved considerably in boardrooms, conflicting reports from London and Berlin on the latest British note to Hitler regarding the German-Polish controversy tended to keep buyers from extending commitments unduly.

The feeling appeared to be growing, however, that, even if war eventuates, American Markets and industry generally are in a position to withstand the shock.

Prominent stock gainers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union, Great Northern, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Celanese, Loft and Union Carbide.

On the home front there were plenty of cheering business indicators. Steel operations at Pittsburgh displayed additional climbing inclinations, with purchases of the metal principally from domestic sources. Satisfactory sales and production of automobiles were not overlooked.

Notice was taken of the comments of Acting Secretary of the Treasury Hanes in which he stressed "indications are that further recovery is under way."

Noted with the Federal Reserve figures from member banks in 101 cities for the week ended Aug. 23, disclosing an increase of $26,000,000 in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans and a drop of $36,000,000 in loans to brokers.

Claim Suspect Confesses Slaying of Follies Dancer

LOS ANGELES POLICE 'SOLVE' CAMPUS DEATH

Chief Says Typesetter Admits Killing Ana Sosyeva, Attacks on Two Other Women.

LOS ANGELES — Police Chief Homer Cross said today that DeWitt Clinton Cook, 20-year-old typesetter, had confessed the college campus slaying last February of Anya Sosyeva, former Ziegfeld Follies dancer, and two other recent attacks upon women.

Cross said Cook, who was apprehended early today after he was seen jomping from the window of W. F. Warnock's home, also confessed that he had attacked Delia Bogard, 17-year-old dancer, and Myrtle Wagner, 17-year-old housemaid.

When the youth was arrested he had an 18-inch piece of wood in his possession. He wore tennis shoes and carried several pairs of gloves and a pocket knife.

After his apprehension, his wife, Mrs. Lorraine Cook, and his mother, Mrs. Ruby Cook, were arrested on suspicion of grand theft.

Miss Sosyeva died shortly after she was found beaten on the college campus.

The Wagner girl was attacked last week in the home where she was employed. She was beaten over the head with a stick and ravished. The piece of wood and part of the girl's underclothing were found later on the roof of a garage.

Cross said Cook confessed his crimes after a night of questioning. He also confessed to several burglaries.

"I did not know any of these girls," Deputy Chief Cross quoted Cook as saying. "My purpose was robbery but a strange urge came over me to attack them. I don't know just how I happened to be on the college campus that night."

New Coach Would Give Every Child Chance at Sports

Expanding the scope of physical education in the public schools, so that each child is given an opportunity to participate in some form of athletics, is the aspiration of Paul Snyder, newly appointed football coach of Mansfield high school, as revealed in a talk given at today's meeting of the Rotary club, held at Westbrook Country club. Herbert R. Slough was program chairman.

Snyder, who came to Mansfield from a coaching position in the Mt. Vernon high school, outlined the football schedule of Mansfield high school for the approaching season and told of his plans for developing the material with which he hopes to make a creditable showing during the season.

An idea of emphasizing health education in connection with physical education was also mentioned as having advantages in the training of children through the grade schools and during their four years in high school.

L. E. Osborne, of Westinghouse, former Rotarian at Springfield, Mass., and Herbert R. Fraser, former Mansfielder, now instructor in economics at Swarthmore college, were guests at the meeting.

Next week's meeting will return to the Mansfield-Leland hotel, with Robert B. Black as program chairman.

Paul Snyder is to make another appearance this week when he gives a football talk Thursday to the Kiwanis club, at Westbrook Country club, with Joy A. Herbert as program chairman.

HITLER WORKS ON HIS REPLY

ing that Britain had modified its stand and that what had seemed almost a hopeless situation might still be improved.

Talked For 50 Minutes.

Henderson left the chancellery, where Hitler had received him in his study, at 11:22 p. m. He had talked to Hitler for 50 minutes, longer, apparently, than had been expected.

No sooner had Henderson driven off than Hitler summoned his most confidential advisers, and began a long discussion with them of the British message.

The situation as it was seen here was that the fate of peace still hinged on the decisions of the big men of Europe. Hope persisted here that something might happen to prevent war.

But Nazis and the closely controlled Nazi press said still that Hitler must have the Polish corridor as well as Danzig, and they enlarged on this to include some more territory which Hitler thinks should be his.

Notices had been posted on advertisement pillars yesterday that further groups of the army classes of 1909, 1907, 1910, 1911 and 1913 would be called up during the first week of September. It was estimated that the new groups would total about 400,000.

Germany's military preparations had been completed. Shock troops were at their posts. But troops continue to move, and column after column of light motorized units speeded through Berlin.

7 Killed In Rail Bomb Blast, Warsaw Reports.

WARSAW—(INS)—Polish-German tension reached a new peak today when seven persons were killed in a bomb explosion on the railroad at Tarnow.

The blast partially destroyed the Tarnow station at an important junction on the line into German-controlled Slovakia.

Authorities said one German and one German-born Pole were arrested.

Continuing its mobilization and civilian defense measures, Poland announced that not one inch of her territory would be given up, while the press maintained its series of accounts of border incidents.

German troops in the Sylau district undermined railroad bridges from Poland into East Prussia, was one charge.

Continued distribution of gas masks in Danzig has thrown the free city's populace into a panic, according to Warsaw reports. Ration cards will be introduced tomorrow, it was asserted. Many members of the anti-Nazi Danzig opposition were said to be fleeing into Poland.

(German troops have occupied the whole of eastern Slovakia, the London Daily Telegraph reported from Warsaw. German troops, said the account, also are massed along the Vah river. Troop movements have been marked particularly on the Slovak-Hungarian frontier, according to the Telegraph.)

AUTOIST, UNABLE TO PAY $75 FINE, FACES 54-DAY JAIL TERM

John C. Wright, 37, a Cleveland salesman, began a 54-day term in the county jail today as the result of his failure to pay a $75 fine invoked in municipal court this morning on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Arraigned before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, Wright pleaded guilty and was fined $75 and costs and his operator's license revoked for one year. Ignoring his plea to take his car because he was "broke," the court sentenced him to the county jail to "sit it out."

State highway patrolmen who arrested Wright on U. S. route 42 north of Mansfield last night testified that the defendant was "taking up the whole road." They said they found two partly filled bottles of bay rum in the machine.

A $50 bond posted three months ago by August G. Gardner, 39, Cleveland attorney, was ordered forfeited in court today when he failed to appear to answer charges of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. Judge Kalbfleisch also revoked his driving rights for one year. Gardner's case had been postponed three times.

Gardner was arrested by police on May 20 after his machine had figured in a collision with two other cars on South Walnut street.

In another case today, Glenn B. Stoner, 71 Park avenue west, convicted on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident was fined $10 and costs.

Stoner's driving rights were automatically revoked in accordance with provisions of the financial responsibility law which makes revocation mandatory upon conviction.

The charges were filed by L. F. Winkle, 54 Wolfe avenue, reformatory guard, who testified Stoner refused to give him his name and address following a collision last Saturday on South Park street.

Willard Christman, 99 East Arch street, charged with speeding on Lexington avenue this morning, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs and his driver's license suspended for 10 days.

Color Harmonizer Does Visualizing For Shopper Now

When a Mansfield woman goes shopping for new living room furniture or bedroom draperies, she need no longer try to carry the exact color of the carpets and walls in her mind, according to G. E. Hedges, manager of the Hedges Factory Furniture company, 30 South Main street.

A new device, known as the Kroehler color harmonizer, and a revolutionary step in interior decorating, will do the visualizing for her.

This "pre-tester," which is available for use at the Factory store, makes it possible to justify individual color tastes in as many as 343 different combinations. For example if you want a dark blue living room suite, the salesman turns on a shadow box in which the color of the suite is tested against the color of your walls and carpets, so that you can see the combined effect before your eyes.

Sales surveys show that the selection of the fabrics and colors for furniture, which will harmonize with rugs, walls and draperies already in the home, is one of the most perplexing problems facing furniture buyers today, according to Hedges. The "pre-tester," he believes will be the answer to this problem.

ROOSEVELT IN CLOSE STUDY OF BRITISH REPLY

Copy of Text of London's Answer to Hitler Sent to White House.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —President Roosevelt and his foreign affairs advisers gave close study today to an official text of Great Britain's replay to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's demands on Poland.

The text was delivered to the White House last night by the British embassy and the president began an immediate exploration of its language in hope of finding there a possible way out of Europe's new crisis.

But so far as the United States was concerned, there was no official comment or even an unofficial observation on the British note or its terms. The president preferred to mark time until Hitler, the real key to the situation, replies to London.

Meanwhile, the president pored over diplomatic correspondence and dispatches while awaiting his regular 4 p. m. press conference when he may again discuss the developments abroad.

On the basis of several overnight cables from the trouble zone, there was a growing disposition on the part of ranking officials to predict that a temporary palliative might be administered to the "war of nerves."

Those in closest contact with the foreign crisis were much more hopeful of immediate peace today than they were 24 hours ago.

Word that the British government had delivered the strongest kind of a negative answer to German Fuehrer Hitler while Moscow was letting reports leak out there would be a "delay" in ratification of the Russo-German non-aggression pact, offered the brightest ray of hope to skeptical Washington officials.

Further note was taken of the change in the Japanese cabinet's personnel. Several responsible spokesmen seemed to think last-minute developments tended toward some kind of at least a delaying series of inter-capital parleys.

Third Term Issue Comes to Test In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss—(AP)— Mississippi Democrats voted today on who shall be governor for the next four years — an outspoken pro-Roosevelt man or a candidate supported by men who might oppose the president at the 1940 Democratic National convention.

Martin Sennett (Mike) Conner was backed by Sen. Pat Harrison, who has opposed some New Deal theories, while Paul B. Johnson was supported by Sen. Theo G. (the man) Bilbo, vociferous third term advocate. Senatorial influence would be felt in the state's delegation to the convention.

The primary victor will be the next governor, since Republican votes are negligible in this state. This is a run-off from a primary Aug. 8.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Two robbers held up an east side office of the Ohio National bank here today but were frightened away by a woman after getting $1,000.

CHAPTER XXII

"If you think she would care about it," Elizabeth answered, but her heart sank at the thought.

"I am quite sure she won't care about it," Miss Thornley declared. "Still, you might make the suggestion."

Elizabeth went up to Penelope's room and knocked softly.

"Come in."

Penelope was sitting up in bed without any sign of a headache.

"Are you better?" Elizabeth asked. "Aunt Thornley said——"

Her sister broke in. "I know, I told her I had a headache but I haven't. It was the only excuse I could think of."

She looked at the younger girl with a faint smile.

"At least, if I stay in bed, I can't be told to rouse myself and take an interest in life," she added dryly.

* * *

Elizabeth stood at the foot of the bed feeling a little at a loss as she always did in Penelope's presence.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" she asked.

"Do you mean can you hold my hands and dry my tears?" Penelope asked briskly. "If so, let me assure you that I never shed tears and that I dislike having my hand held. But you might, if you will be so good, look in the drawer over there, the second drawer, and bring me a small leather box. Wait a moment, it's locked. Here are the keys.

She tossed the keys towards her sister, and Elizabeth flushed a little as she picked them up.

"Were you very bored last night?" Penelope inquired.

"No. I enjoyed it very much."

"In that boy's company?" Penelope said cynically. "I can't think how you can tolerate him. He gets on my nerves."

"He's kind," Elizabeth defended him. "Which key is it?"

"The small one. Are you going to marry him, Elizabeth?"

Elizabeth laughed. "Of course I'm not."

She found the right key and fitted it into the lock.

"Is this the box?" She turned around with the small leather case in her hand, caught her sleeve on the head of the key and let the box fall, scattering its contents in all directions.

Penelope gave an exclamation of annoyance.

"How clumsy you are." She threw back the bedclothes and came to help collect the scattered trinkets.

Elizabeth was already down on her knees, a little flushed and apologetic.

"I'm sorry, I caught my sleeve —" She sat back on her heels. "Is this all?" Oh no, there's another ring." She picked it up from the thickness of the rug and held it out in the palm of her hand.

"Why, it's a wedding ring," she said.

Penelope snatched the ring from Elizabeth's hand.

"Yes, it's a wedding ring," she echoed. "Is there any reason why it shouldn't be?"

She slipped it onto her third finger, holding her thin hand outstretched for her sister's inspection.

"A trap to catch a dream'," she said bitterly. "No wonder married women refuse to wear them nowadays. They're such damning evidence."

She sat down on the side of the bed, still critically examining her hand, and there was a queer silence before Elizabeth asked slowly, kneeling on the floor:

"Penelope—are you married?"

Penelope looked down at her and laughed.

"Am I married? You sound like the deluded heroine in an old-fashioned drama!"

She flung herself into a dramatic pose with her thin arms flung high above her head as she cried mockingly, " 'Are you married? Answer me! Answer me.' "

Her arms suddenly fell limply again and there was a tragic silence before she said suddenly:

"Yes, I am married—married! Married! Married!"

Again her voice rose shrilly as it had risen that afternoon in Paris when she cried out Kim Lawless' name.

Elizabeth gave a little choking cry.

"Penelope!"

She stared at her sister with frozen eyes, and suddenly Penelope covered her face with her hands.

"I wish they had let me die," she said, with the quietness of despair. "Why didn't they let me die?"

Mrs. Selby glanced towards the open window with a frown on her pleasant face.

From the garden came a tumult of shrill voices and laughter, and presently a girlish form dashed across the lawn with Roy in hot pursuit. When they had passed out of sight, she said with a sigh:

"I cannot imagine what has happened to Elizabeth. I never saw such an alteration in a girl! When she first came to the house I thought she was particularly unaffected and charming, but now—well, I am beginning to hope that after all Roy is not serious in his attentions, because I am sure that she is incapable of making him happy."

She paused hopefully, but her husband did not raise his eyes from the newspaper until she said with a touch of exasperation:

"Well, why don't you say something?"

He looked up then with mild surprise.

"My dear, what do you want me to say? The girl seems all right as far as I can judge. Young people are all a little wild, but they will get over it in time, and settle down as we did."

"As we did!" his wife retorted. "Did I ever rush all over the place in trousers? Did I ever call every stray man 'darling,' without expecting him to take it seriously?"

Mr. Selby chuckled.

"You probably would have done just that—had it been the thing at the time," he answered. "And, as a matter of fact, I consider that trousers are distinctly becoming to Elizabeth."

"Becoming!" his wife echoed eloquently.

There was a short silence before she started again.

"Last night—when the Beasleys were here—I suppose you know they were playing The Murder Game until well past midnight! And without the slightest consideration for those unfortunates who were trying to sleep! I spoke to Roy this morning, but he only laughed and asked why I didn't stay up and join in the fun!"

"And why didn't you?" her husband ventured. "They seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely, though I must admit I heard one or two blood-curdling screams."

"Such nonsense!" Mrs. Selby protested. "Elizabeth tells me they were looking for Bingo, or whatever absurd name they have christened our alleged ghost."

"And did Bingo obligingly materialize?" her husband asked interestedly.

"Of course not! I don't believe in ghosts, for one thing, and for another, supposing there are such things, is any self-respecting ghost likely to appear with such a pandemonium everywhere?" But, in spite of her matter-of-fact words, Mrs. Selby shivered a little. "If I believed in ghosts I should certainly not continue to live in this house," she added positively.

But Mr. Selby smiled, and with an impatient gesture his wife discarded her embroidery and went out into the garden.

She was not feeling at all happy, although she could not explain why.

She had been quite pleased when Roy and Barbara informed her that Elizabeth was to continue the visit which had been so summarily broken. She liked Elizabeth—or, rather, she had liked her—until a week ago, when a very changed and different Elizabeth suddenly descended upon the household and proceeded to play havoc with its cheerful respectability.

"It must be the effects of Paris," Mrs. Selby decided, as she stood in the sunshine, shading her eyes and trying to see what had become of her family.

"Roy!" she called. "Elizabeth! Barbara!"

A charming voice answered from somewhere.

"Coo-ee! Coo-ee!" And a pair of slim legs in rather baggy, but perfectly cut, trousers suddenly came into view from between the branches of a tree, and Elizabeth's face, framed by leaves and tousled hair, peered down at her.

"Here I am, but don't tell Roy. He thinks I'm somewhere in the orchard."

Mrs. Selby stared up at her.

"How ever did you get there?" she demanded.

Elizabeth laughed.

"I swarmed up," she admitted. "Barbara tried, too, but she couldn't manage it."

"I should think not, indeed!" Mrs. Selby said firmly. "Barbara has far too much sense to risk breaking her neck."

"Oh, but she'd have liked to!" Elizabeth protested. "Only she couldn't! Still, if you think I ought to come down—" And the slim body dropped gracefully from its precarious position on a swaying branch, and landed at Mrs. Selby's feet.

"Well, really!" the elder woman protested, but she was fully alive to the picture Elizabeth made.

In spite of the disheveled hair and flushed face—or perhaps because of them—she looked like some graceful nymph.

She pushed back her tumbled hair and glanced apprehensively across the garden for a sign of Roy.

"I think you had better come indoors and have a cool drink," Mrs. Selby said practically, and, against her will, for she was a kind-hearted woman, she remembered the stories she had heard of this girl's upbringing and her mother's history.

Perhaps, after all, there was something in tradition, she thought, and again she hoped that Roy was not really serious in his devotion.

Elizabeth dutifully walked with her towards the house, and Mrs. Selby noticed, with a sense of disquiet, that the small feet peeping from under the baggy trousers were guiltless of stockings. Just sandals! Tied with gaily colored strings!

"Isn't it a heavenly morning?" Elizabeth said suddenly.

"It's certainly very hot." Mrs. Selby agreed. "And I think it's a mistake for you to be bare-headed in the sun—sunstroke can be a very serious matter."

"I love the heat!"

There was a little silence before Mrs. Selby tried again.

"You really ought to take more care of yourself, Elizabeth," she said. "I am sure you are not too strong, and all these late nights and rushing about must undermine your constitution."

Elizabeth laughed.

"You mean, perhaps I may die young?" she inquired, and then with a sigh, "I shan't! It's only people who want to live who die young."

Panicky Foreign Money Floods U. S. Exchanges

After Twenty Years of Preparation

WHILE uncertainty still shrouds the European situation, with immediate war or continuance of temporary peace hanging in the balance, a distressing thought in connection with the whole thing is that whatever may be done now can go only a little way toward settling the age-old controversies among European nations—and that if war is averted for the present there is no assurance against similar crises being reached again and again.

Adolf Hitler grew to power through the hope that he aroused in Germany that under his leadership the territory relinquished under the Versailles treaty would be restored and Germany made an even greater nation than it was before the World war.

The Polish Corridor, which is Poland's outlet to the Baltic sea, and which separates Germany from its province of East Prussia, is a part of the post-war apportionment of territory, and the "Free City of Danzig" is another of the Versailles penalties enforced on Germany during the heat of passion which marked formulation of peace terms to which a subdued nation was compelled to submit.

Except that more than two decades have elapsed, during which Germany has been permitted to regain military strength sufficient to again menace the peace of Europe, present conditions are not unlike those which existed after the Armistice was signed and while peace negotiations were under way at Versailles.

At that time Germany fought bitterly against the severity of the penalties proposed by the Allies, but was finally forced to accept—being in no position to resume hostilities . . . which would have been the only alternative.

And now, aside from the alignment of nations being somewhat altered, it is as if there had been no lapse of twenty-one years . . . as if Germany had merely been waiting to grow up new armies and re-establish its armament before calling off the armistice, flouting the treaty of Versailles and renewing World war hostilities.

Unless Danzig and Polish domination of the Corridor are conceded to Germany it would appear that war between Poland and Germany cannot be averted—even if temporarily delayed.

Whether Great Britain and France will be participants in such a war depends on the seriousness with which they regard their guarantees to Poland and their present attitude toward sanctity of what remains of the Versailles treaty.

There is little to encourage belief that such a war would be of short duration, or that the United States could long avoid having a part in it.

A truck driver is usually a careful driver—otherwise he might lose his job. But the private motorist has nothing to lose but his life.

One Small Nation's Policy

TO THE ARGUMENT that nations lacking natural resources are doomed to poverty unless they go out and take them from nations having them, a distinguished American scholar replies. "Look at Denmark."

That little country, competing for a living with big and wealthy neighbors, has no oil, coal, waterpower or minerals, hardly any timber and naturally poor soil. Yet Denmark has made herself prosperous and has today probably as high a standard of living as can be found anywhere.

How was this done? The Danes faced realities intelligently and used their soil for what it was capable of — that is, dairying and poultry-raising. The people and government fostered these pursuits scientifically and found near at hand rich markets for their products. They also built and sold fine motorships and other things calling for intelligent application. The result is prosperity, contentment and happiness.

According to astronomers, Mars is moving along in a fog—and the Mars observers may be noting a similar condition in this direction.

Reversion In Africa

AMERICANS may note with interest a statement that Africa is being given back to the animals. F. A. Smyth, who operates an American travel service in Cairo, says buffalo are increasing so rapidly now that they are becoming a nuisance in some parts of the continent.

Many other species of wild beasts, whose extermination has been feared, are becoming more numerous. Elephants are so plentiful now in Uganda that last year the authorities allowed 1,500 of them to be killed. Hippopotami are multiplying until they are beginning to damage the planter's fields.

In view of what man has done to most of the continents, it seems only fair to give the animals a chance to show what they can do in what is called, rather quaintly, the "Dark Continent."

Looking forward to a "fireside chat" brings the disturbing thought that the coal-buying season is just around the corner.

Jail Route Immigrants

A PUERTO RICAN custom of some years' standing has been for young men to raid and destroy mail boxes as a means of getting into the United States. This being a serious federal offense, the government would sentence the culprits to three years' imprisonment in the Atlanta penitentiary. During their imprisonment they would learn the language; and being American citizens, they could remain in the country when released.

Now those malefactors are being foiled by being sent to their own island jails. Here is at least a hint that a lot of people born in this country might show more appreciation of their blessings.

That nine-day coast to coast sight-seeing motor trip taken by an Eastern schoolgirl and her chum, probably offered opportunity for such comments as: "That's a nice town we're coming to—wasn't it?"

According to a London doctor, "Only the anticipation of the joys of summer keeps mankind going through the winter"—but what about the folks that like winter better?

J. C. Penney, successful merchandiser, says the secret of success is "Work"—and it might be worth trying sometime, if everything else fails.

It seems odd that grown-up men should take their golf so much more seriously than boys used to take their "shinny."

Among the hardships of a dignified man is the requirement that he wear a coat on a hot day.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — The last war ended before the U. S. really felt the regimentation that must be imposed if a nation throws its whole weight against an enemy. But the machinery is already being put together to put the country into its next war far more expeditiously than before.

For 11 months after the United States entered the war in 1917, all was confusion. The navy was bidding against the army and both were bidding against the allies who were desperate for supplies they had been buying here rather free-handedly before we entered.

Then came the war industries board headed by a tall, energetic New York financier already so rich that profiteering could not appeal to him. He was Bernard Baruch. He brought order out of chaos and congress recognized it with a decoration.

Another Is Named.

NOW the government has picked another man, even younger than Baruch in his war days, to head the war industries administration when we tangle with our next enemy. He is Edward R. Stettinius, 39-year-old chairman of the United States Steel corporation.

When the next war comes, he will be, next to the commander of the military forces and the president, the most important man in America.

Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, said Stettinius will have even more authority than Baruch had.

Baruch could stop an industry in its tracks if he felt it was not cooperating, or if he considered it not essential to winning the war.

As one gesture it was planned to put the whole country into a sort of uniform to save time and material.

What It Means.

"HAD the war gone on another year," said Baruch, "our whole civil population would have gradually emerged (as wardrobes and inventories became exhausted) in cheap but serviceable uniform. . . . Unnecessary trim in clothing would have disappeared. Steel had already been taken out of women's corsets."

Shoes were to be streamlined.

"No one who did not have a card of the war industries board in his window could sell shoes," says Baruch, "and only the standardized shoes could be sold. . . . The shoes were to be stamped class A, B, or C, and had to be of a quality prescribed and sold at a price fixed. . . . Through restrictions on his labor, money, raw materials and transportation, no manufacturer would have been permitted to sell to any dealer violating the regulations. The armistice stopped execution of the plan."

But just to show what it means, Baruch says:

"Once unity is attained, experience has shown beyond question that the mobilized industry of America is a weapon of offense or defense far more potent than anything the world has ever seen—more terrible, I think, than the mind of any man has ever imagined."

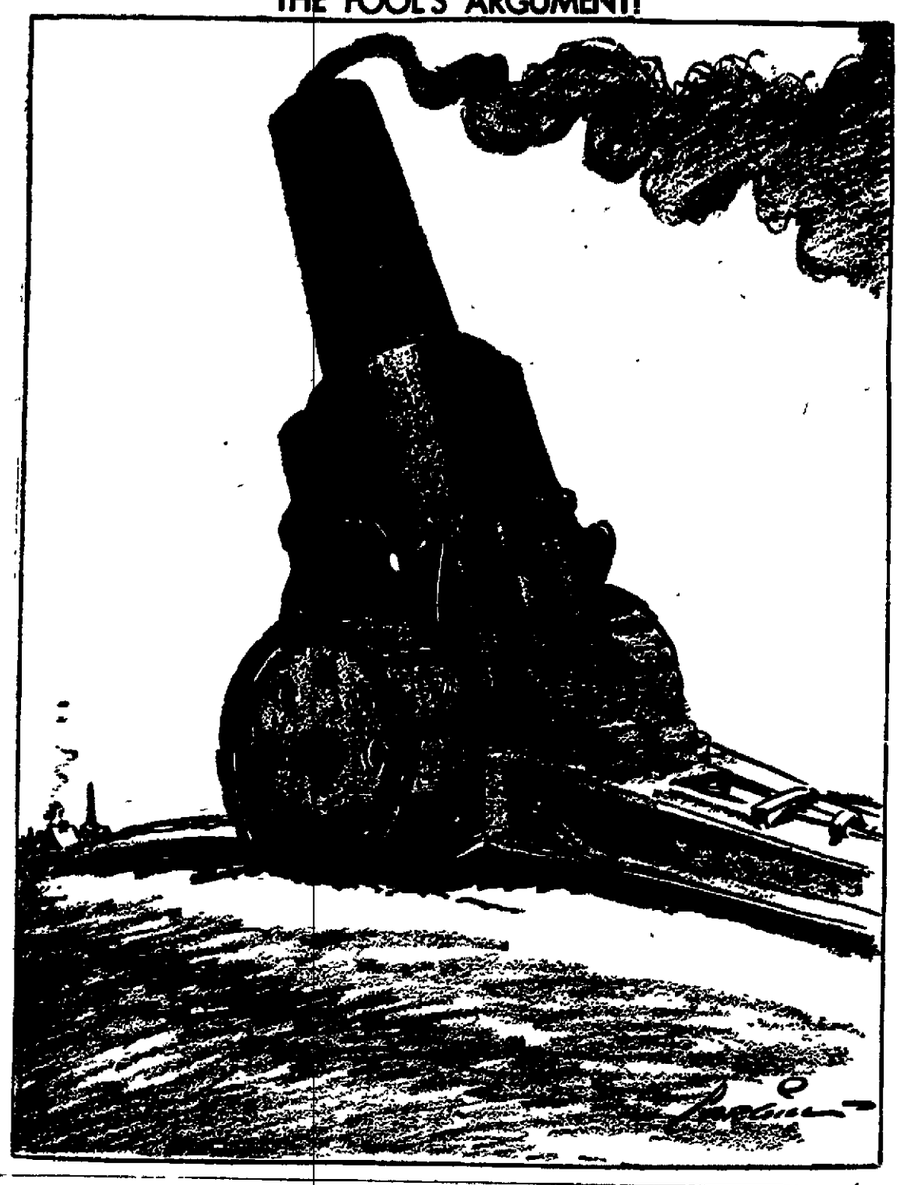
THE FOOL'S ARGUMENT!



Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Not long ago a United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted one-fifth of the profits of the motion picture "Dishonored Lady" to Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon whose play was unintentionally plagiarized by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The Magistrate said his decision was influenced by testimony of film distributors, who believed that the names of the stars, Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery, plus the prestige of the producing company, had more to do with the film's success than the story material.

We can not cavil with Judge Learned Hand on this decision, being no student of law, but we should like respectfully to point out the variance of opinion between the film distributors and the film exhibitors, who obviously do not see eye to eye with Hollywood on the appeal of Hollywood's star players.

ONLY a year or so ago exhibitors were denouncing Miss Crawford and other high-bracket wage earners in Hollywood as "fading" stars whose names were "death" at the box office. This complaint was published in trade journals in the form of full-page statements and directed against the Hollywood system of forcing certain pictures on exhibitors at costs not in keeping with their box-office value. This system, the exhibitors said, compelled them to pay exorbitant fees for pictures whose stars were "passe." Unless a revision of the system was brought about, many exhibitors would be forced to the wall.

Practically every high-salaried player in Hollywood was named in this complaint, and the producers, as well as the stars, were considerably embarrassed and hard put to defend themselves.

Now that the case of Miss Barnes and Mr. Sheldon has reached a decision in the courts, there is a disposition in some quarters to confuse the distributors with the exhibitors. Exhibitors, except in the cases of the big chain theaters, are the little guys who operate theaters and have to take what Hollywood sends them. Distributors are sectional clearing-houses for the film companies themselves. They run the exchanges, and see to the needs of the exhibitors in their immediate territories.

THE best story on exhibitors we've read is an account in Variety telling of a former exhibitor, now in prison, who has been put in charge of motion pictures in that prison. In the world of films behind bars, he is absolute czar. He has set up his own rules, one of which is that spectators (convicts) may not laugh at cops in embarrassing situations. For instance, if a cop shoots at a thug and misses him once, or twice, you can't laugh. But if the cop misses a third time, then the convicts may howl their heads off.

Not long ago circulars were sent to exhibitors by a major film company, asking comment on drawing power and audience response to their pictures. One of these reached the imprisoned czar, who promptly wrote back a glowing testimonial. In effect, he said, "Business is tremendous. I tell the warden what we are showing; he pushes a button and presto! Full house!"

Edith Cavell—What Was Her Secret?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHE must hurry. It was coming so quickly now.

Only a few minutes left—seconds maybe—before she'd hear the marching feet. . .sense the massed guns within the black, walled space and feel their focus on her lifted face.

And then, perhaps—the dawn?

She quivered; pushed the thought away. No time to wonder now. She'd done the thing deliberately—knowing the risk. Freed men from horror as gladly as she'd freed them from pain . . . seeing it all as one service. A nurse couldn't take sides with Hate. Life and Love were greater than national barbains or boundaries.

"Patriotism isn't enough; one must have no hatred or bitterness for anyone." She'd said that and lived it—now she must pay the price. Half the world was pleading that she might be spared, battering Berlin with their frantic prayers.

But she wasn't pleading. All that was over. Only one thing remained — to send some word to those who would be left; some word that would help them understand, make them see death needn't really matter, that there was Something which would see them through both Life and Death, if they had the courage to take it. But where were the words, in this brief interval? Ah! that was it! Bending she began to write . . . faster . . . faster.

"Sad . . . this good-bye. I remember . . . I had wished . . . Forgive me . . . I hope you'll not forget the little talks we had. I told you that voluntary sacrifices would make you happy—that your idea of Duty toward God and yourselves would give you support in the sad moments of life; in the face of death. My fondest wishes for you all . . . my thanks."

She paused . . . a presence blacked the page. They'd come! So, rising quietly, she laid the note aside . . . passed through the door—

And died.

Edith Cavell—bravest heroine, most tragic victim of the World war. She nursed hundreds, regardless of their nationality; saved the lives of 200 other allied soldiers by helping them escape across Holland's neutral border. For this she was secretly imprisoned for weeks, tried, found guilty and hurriedly shot by a German firing squad.

Today the world worships her memory. Shortly, Herbert Wilcox will release a movie based on her heroic life . . . a movie which should draw us as to a shrine. And in London's Trafalgar Square there stands a statue to her memory, with one word carved above its quiet face — "HUMANITY!" Pausing, one wonders:

WHAT WAS THE SECRET OF THAT STRONG SERENITY? How did she do it? She was no super-mind or shining saint. She must have felt our common human fear, our common pride; have clung, as we all do, to life and love. Where did she find the strength to rise above that fear and put aside her cherished private plans?

Where do they all find it—those simple parents, shabby doctors, homeless priests, who spend their lives in service to the weak? What is the secret of their cheerfulness, their courage, their power and their peace?

Edith Cavell told that secret in one word—"SACRIFICE." Two thousand years ago another pointed the same way. He who wished to save his life, must lose it, Christ said. And these, His followers, prove He spoke the truth.

They are not foolish sentimentalists—crackpot fanatics—these selfless souls who die that others may live. They are the wisest people on earth. For they have exchanged their petty personal plans for a vast adventure. They have sacrificed individual life to become a part of all life. By daily dying many little deaths, they have freed themselves from the fear of all death and the bondage of all life.

THEY ARE NO LONGER PRIVATE PEOPLE. THEY ARE PARTNERS WITH GOD . . . AND SHARE HIS SHINING COMPENSATIONS.

Words of the Wise

He who accounts all things easy will have many difficulties.—Lao-Tsze.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One undercover development that played a very important role in convincing Washington authorities of the extreme gravity of the European crisis was the flood of foreign buying of U. S. stocks and bonds.

The day the president made his peace appeal to Hitler and President Moscicki of Poland, a large portion of the 1,300,000 shares traded on the New York stock exchange was European orders. The unexpected firm tone of the market throughout the crisis is attributed by Wall Street and SEC authorities largely to foreign buying.

How much money has been invested on this side in the past ten days is not definitely known, but experts estimate it to run into tens of millions of dollars.

Most of the orders have come from London and Amsterdam, with Paris and Brussels also sending a heavy volume. The buying has been chiefly in utility and industrial securities, with chemicals, textiles and aviation stocks favored.

Whether the stock exchanges are closed in the event of war depends entirely on what happens in the market. If there is heavy liquidation and a price crash appears imminent, it has been secretly decided that the SEC will immediately order a shutdown. If there is no panic the exchanges will not be disturbed.

Code Cables.

HOW heavy is the volume of the state department's confidential cables is indicated by the glow of flames flickering at night on the fourth floor of the old state department building.

On occasion the flames have been such as to alarm late-working clerks, especially because this floor contains the vital code section and some of the most important messages received from U. S. ambassadors.

Explanation of the flames is the practice of code workers to destroy all work sheets, etc., at the end of the day. This is to prevent possible leaks to anyone who might search waste-paper baskets. The practice started when the late Frank B. Kellogg was secretary of state, when the Mexican government came into possession of secret state department documents.

Ordinarily the burning of these papers is a trivial matter which takes place in a large open fireplace, and is noticed by no one. The fact that the flames now attract attention indicates the increased volume of confidential dispatches arriving from Europe and Asia.

Department Ghosts.

THE tense situation in Europe is playing hob with the nerves of late-working clerks and officials of the state department, several of whom have been scared out of their wits by the sudden appearance of a grotesque black and red object bobbing about and leering in the window.

The ensuing shrieks have brought members of the guard, who patiently explain it is nothing but a bunch of gas-filled toy balloons, attached to a string, with which a solemn colored laborer parades about the building at dusk, scaring off pigeons and starlings that roost among the many nooks and crannies of the rambling old building.

The clerks, however, have had their revenge. Several times the "Balloon Barrage" has been "shot down" by well directed paper clips, propelled by husky government rubber bands, and fired from the windows of the building.

Tough John.

JOHN ROGGE, forthright young assistant attorney general in Louisiana, may be a good Democrat, but certain other Democrats don't think so. They are having a tough time making him listen to political expediency.

The other day one of them, Freeman W. Burford of the East Texas Refining company, called Rogge on the long distance telephone from Dallas. Burford had been indicted in connection with a hot oil deal which also involved ex-Governor Leche of Louisiana, but had refused to go from Texas to Louisiana to surrender, and Federal Judge Davidson of Texas had upheld him.

So, calling Rogge in New Orleans, Burford said:

"I want you to know, Mr. Rogge, that I'm a good Democrat. I'm for Roosevelt for a third term; and just the other day I helped the Young Democrats in their move for a third term. You and I have a lot of things in common, so let's talk this thing over. I believe I can help you on this case."

"I'll be glad to talk to you," replied Rogge, "but first it's up to you to come in here and surrender."

Burford talked at great length—30 minutes worth of long distance tolls—but Rogge's reply was: "It's up to you to come in and surrender. If not, you're a traveling man, Mr. Burford, and we're bound to pick you up the minute you set your foot outside of Texas."

And that was that. Third term or no third term, Burford has to make up his mind whether to surrender.

Note—It is almost unprecedented for a judge to refuse removal motion on a criminal indictment, but Judge Davidson, a Roosevelt appointee, criticized the Louisiana grand jury for lack of impartiality and said: "I fear that the time will not soon arrive when graft will be suppressed in Louisiana so long as rubber-stamp men hold the seal of the state and put an O. K. on the crooks that happen to be over and above them."

Edison's Wax Record.

PART of the modernizing of the navy department performed by Acting Secretary Charles Edison consisted of installing dictating machines, of the type invented by his father, the late Thomas A. Edison.

As a further aid to efficiency, the machines in Mr. Edison's private office are operated by remote control. In other words, while he dictates his letters into the mouthpiece, the machine which records his words on the wax cylinder is located in an adjoining room, where his efficient stenographer, Mrs. McDermott, can transcribe the discs as soon as he has finished talking.

Digging Potatoes

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MANY potato fields are brown now, with foliage that has withered some weeks ago. In low places the new growth of weeds and grass has taken possession, while on the hills the faded stalks are almost completely gone and the light brown clay is bare.

I saw a farmer digging in his mammoth patch with a two-row digger pulled by a caterpillar tractor. One man operated this, while another sat upon the digger seat regulating it to the proper depth. When the outfit came up to the highway and turned around, I watched the rodlike elevators raise the sail, the stems and the potatoes. As the load moved upward, the crumbly soil fell through and large clods, fine white potatoes, stalks and weeds fell down upon the moistened upturned soil the digger had made.

There were no deep furrows left, and the fresh white-skinned cobblers laying thick upon the level soil, made the drab, faded surface appear strangely fruitful. Ten men with wire pails followed the machine stooping constantly to pick up the spuds, which they carried and dumped into a truck with a low, wide bed. Day after day this task is repeated until more than a hundred acres are harvested. Potato raising is this man's business.

Up along the hillside, near the graveled road, he built a long, spacious cave, and covered it with earth. When the grader has separated the fancy potatoes from the smaller ones, and those affected by scab or bruised are sorted out by hand, the storage bins beneath the hill will receive the best fruit of the field. Several thousand bushels can be stored to be delivered according to the rise and fall of prices in the market.

WHEN I came home that afternoon, I saw my neighbor plowing out his crop with a team hitched to a big, single shovel plow. He dangled at the handles in the rear, while the fickle shovel kept him guessing which direction it might shift the next instant. I knew so well the difficulties he encountered for his team either moved too fast or stopped and turned about to nip some tempting grass or weed.

When I looked down along the quick, wavy mark he made the harvest did not seem abundant. Many of the larger spuds were pushed out beneath the dirt. The one who picks them up will have to kick and scratch in the loose soil to find full measure of the meagre crop.

Boys, Birds and Guns.

Editor News-Journal

In our yard are four baby wrens, dying of starvation. A boy with a gun just had to shoot something and our mother wren was the victim.

When the birds were ready for breakfast this morning, no one came with a nice juicy bug, so they decided to get out of their box and call for Mother—but it was in vain, for their mother was dead.

We lost a wonderful little friend when Jenny Wren was shot. She had lived in our yard since spring, keeping our garden free from bugs and worms. Besides working for us in that way, she raised two nests of babies for us to enjoy.

The first three grew up very well but the last four are dying because they have no mother to feed them.

There are a good many boys right here in my neighborhood who have guns to shoot sparrows, but not one of them knows a thrush, ground bird or wren from a sparrow.

If parents insist on buying guns for their children why not require them to teach children the difference in birds—if the parents know.

WAR OR PEACE UP TO HITLER, PREMIER SAYS

Chamberlain Declares British Sticking to Polish Pledge of Armed Assistance.

the house "I cannot say that the danger of war has receded since the house met last Thursday."

Cheers greeted his declaration that "there has been no change in the policy of the government," which has been to stand firmly by Poland in the event of aggression.

"It is more than necessary to urge the press to exercise the utmost restraint," Chamberlain said.

An alleged verbatim quotation of the British note to Adolf Hitler published today, Chamberlain said, "is an invention from beginning to end."

Calls It 'Final Answer.'

"Our final answer," Chamberlain said, was handled to Hitler last night by Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson.

He indicated there would be no immediate publication of the momentous diplomatic exchange on which the peace of Europe apparently depends.

"We have made it plain that our obligations to Poland will be carried out," he said in measured tones. A roar of approval rose from the house.

"At this moment the position is that we are awaiting Hitler's reply," he continued.

Relating briefly a part of the diplomatic maneuvers on which the eyes of the world have been anxiously centered, Chamberlain said:

"On (Friday) the day after the House adjourned we received information that Hitler had asked the British ambassador in Berlin to call on him that day.

"In the course of the afternoon, we are told that Hitler had suggested that it would be a good thing if the ambassador flew home to give extended account of his conversation with Hitler.

"On Saturday, Sir Nevile Henderson arrived by plane from Berlin and we understood from him that in Berlin it was not considered to be necessary that he should go back the same day as the German government were anxious that we should give careful study to the communication he had to make to us.

"The cabinet devoted the whole of Saturday and Sunday to very careful, exhaustive and thorough consideration of the document brought by Sir Nevile and of the reply they proposed to send back."

The prime minister said Hitler left the British government in "no doubt as to his views of the urgency of settling the German-Polish question."

He added he would be glad if he could disclose the fullest information as to the contents of the communications exchanged with Hitler but said "in a situation of such extreme delicacy, when issues so grave hang precariously in the balance, it is not, in the public interest to publish them."

Britain, he said would "naturally welcome" an opportunity of discussing with Germany the issues of a settlement that would find a place in a lasting agreement.

But, he made clear, the outcome hinges entirely upon the manner in which the immediate differences between Poland and Germany could be handled.

These differences, he declared, the government "more than once" had said "should be capable of solution by peaceful means."

"The first requisite, if there is to be any chance of useful discussion, is that tension created by frontier clashes and reports of incidents on both sides of the border should be diminished," he said.

Fighting Fleet Ready.

"The whole of our fighting fleet is ready at a moment's notice to take war dispositions," he said. "Air defense has been placed in a state of instant readiness," he added:

"The British government would hope that if an equitable settlement of Polish-German differences could be reached by free negotiation, that this might lead on to a wider agreement which would accrue to the lasting benefit of Europe and the world at large."

Britain now is waiting for Hitler's reply, he said, and "on the nature of that reply depends whether further time should be given for exploration of the situation and for the operation of the many forces which are working for peace."

Lauding "the remarkable calm" of the British people, Chamberlain noted that a period of waiting often is very trying.

The explanation of British calm, he said, was "first, that none has any doubt as to where our duty lies," and "secondly, we are ready for any eventuality."

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, addressing the house of lords, expressed similar convictions, saying "the position, remains one of great anxiety and danger but hope must not be finally abandoned; there is still hope that reason may prevail."

Ready on All Fronts.

Recounting Britain's preparedness in broad outline, Chamberlain asserted the nation is ready on every front—for war, if war should come.

Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the labor opposition, said "on these issues, we are adamant and immovable. The door is still ajar. I hope it will remain ajar until it closes against the angel of death and the menace of aggression. No nation in Europe would make war except one."

Greenwood urged immediate evacuation of London and other populous centers, saying:

"Suppose the storm broke on Saturday? It might be two, three or four days before evacuation could take place to the extent visualized.

"Unless we evacuate now, the responsibility for the deaths which are caused will lie on that side of the house (the government) and not upon us."

"Rehearsals are not enough," he declared.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, speaking for the liberal opposition, said:

"At this moment, I agree with his majesty's government that they should have the solid support of all peace loving people in this country.

"The last word rests with Herr Hitler."

Mud And Cavalry Poland's Twin Hopes If War Comes

A regiment of Poland's crack cavalry marches along a Polish road during maneuvers. It is said that Poland's twin hopes in event of war with Germany will be her mud, to bog down Hitler's mechanized army, and her cavalry, to maneuver over her vast plains. Poland's army, rich in men, is lacking in mechanized forces, despite Franco-British help in artillery and air force material and personnel.

WINDS UP TWO ROAD PROJECTS

County Resurfacing Program and Grading Job Will Be Finished This Week.

Two of the county's federal aid road projects, involving more than a half million dollars, are scheduled for completion this week, County Engineer Howard C. Sword said today.

Due to be finished first is the $69,000 PWA resurfacing project started early in the summer. Workmen were resurfacing the Winterstine road in Perry and Jefferson townships today and then will move to Monroe township, completing the entire job about Thursday, the engineer said.

Also nearing completion is the county-wide WPA road grading project which has provided jobs for hundreds of WPA workers for about two years.

Sword said the main grading project would be finished by the last of this week, but a few supplementary jobs probably will keep the workmen busy for three more weeks.

Under the PWA resurfacing project, about 94 miles of secondary roads will be treated with stone and asphalt. The project, which is in charge of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, is the first PWA road project in the county.

IT'S 'EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF IN HORSE TRADE,' FARMERS TOLD

Holding to the old theory that it's "every man for himself in a horse trade," Prosecutor G. W. Marriott and Sheriff E. P. Long said today that several farmers south of Mansfield who complained of being "gypped" in recent horse deals probably were "just out of luck."

After investigating two of the complaints, the prosecutor said he was convinced that there was no grounds for action against two horse dealers who were said to have refused to return down payments on horses when the deals were cooled off.

One of the complaining farmers, whose name was not available, told authorities he paid $10 down on a team of horses and agreed to get a government loan to pay the balance of the $150 purchase price.

Unable to obtain the loan, he said he asked the horse dealer for his money back and was refused. He was told that the horses had been sold to another buyer, he related to officials.

"The other buyer just beat him to the deal," the sheriff commented.

Marriott said a second farmer complained that he had paid $5 down on a horse and was unable to get the money back after he called off the deal because the animal had a growth on its neck. The dealer told him the sale was legal and he had a right to keep the down payment, the farmer told authorities.

The prosecutor added that two agents said to be representing a Cincinnati firm had been operating south of Mansfield where they keep five or six horses with which to make their deals.

keep going as long as their fleet remained Europe's premier sea power. And the consensus of the experts in that Nazi bombing planes or submarines could not destroy or cripple British dreadnoughts.

One veteran naval observer says the only way big British or French battleships could be destroyed from the air would be to "anchor them at one place for several days and to lock up their anti-aircraft gunners."

Aviation bombardment could do heavy damage also to French industrial cities, transportation centers and arteries, but it couldn't knock out enough strategic highways and railroads to render impotent France's steel fortresses and large, well-trained army.

Even with Italy's air forces augmenting German squadrons, military men believe the odds still would run heavy against speedy smashing of the British-French combination.

Lightning war, they say, still is a theory, not a fact.

Most experts will tell you it still takes infantry to seize and hold a position in the Spanish and Sino-Japanese wars, as well as the World war, 80 per cent of the casualties were inflicted by the artillery. Infantry and artillery don't move like lightning.

Huges squadrons of mechanized forces are largely post-World war products. They've never been used in a large scale modern conflict.

The Italians tried them, so the grapevine says, in their recent Po valley maneuvers. The results, it is said, were disappointing.

Franco's superior air forces failed notably to achieve quick victory in Spain. But the nationalist's cavalry made a far superior showing to the tanks on both sides.

Ashlander, 82, Hit In Back As Boys Shoot At Rabbit

ASHLAND—Accidentally shot last night by two Ashland youths, William Tracy, 82, was in Samaritan hospital today with a .22 caliber bullet in his back.

Tracy was wounded while walking along a vacant lot near the Eagle Rubber company about 9 p. m. by two youths who said they were shooting rabbits, police reported. The boys gave their names as Bill Thomas, 15, and Gene Dettesfson, 14, both of Ashland. Thomas was handling the gun at the time.

Tracy's condition was reported as "fair" by hospital attendants. Physicians were to take x-ray pictures in an effort to find the exact location of the bullet.

The boys are not being held by authorities. Probate Judge S. H. Boffenmyer said that from what he has learned of the case, the shooting was accidental. Police Chief Herman D. Fletcher said he will wait to see if Tracy recovers before he takes any action.

Panicky Foreign Money Floods U. S. Exchanges

After Twenty Years of Preparation

WHILE uncertainty still shrouds the European situation, with immediate war or continuance of temporary peace hanging in the balance, a distressing thought in connection with the whole thing is that whatever may be done now can go only a little way toward settling the age-old controversies among European nations—and that if war is averted for the present there is no assurance against similar crises being reached again and again.

Adolf Hitler grew to power through the hope that he aroused in Germany that under his leadership the territory relinquished under the Versailles treaty would be restored and Germany made an even greater nation than it was before the World war.

The Polish Corridor, which is Poland's outlet to the Baltic sea, and which separates Germany from its province of East Prussia, is a part of the post-war apportionment of territory, and the "Free City of Danzig" is another of the Versailles penalties enforced on Germany during the heat of passion which marked formulation of peace terms to which a subdued nation was compelled to submit.

Except that more than two decades have elapsed, during which Germany has been permitted to regain military strength sufficient to again menace the peace of Europe, present conditions are not unlike those which existed after the Armistice was signed and while peace negotiations were under way at Versailles.

At that time Germany fought bitterly against the severity of the penalties proposed by the Allies, but was finally forced to accept—being in no position to resume hostilities . . . which would have been the only alternative.

And now, aside from the alignment of nations being somewhat altered, it is as if there had been no lapse of twenty-one years . . . as if Germany had merely been waiting to grow up new armies and re-establish its armament before calling off the armistice, flouting the treaty of Versailles and renewing World war hostilities.

Unless Danzig and Polish domination of the Corridor are conceded to Germany it would appear that war between Poland and Germany cannot be averted—even if temporarily delayed.

Whether Great Britain and France will be participants in such a war depends on the seriousness with which they regard their guarantees to Poland and their present attitude toward sanctity of what remains of the Versailles treaty.

There is little to encourage belief that such a war would be of short duration, or that the United States could long avoid having a part in it.

A truck driver is usually a careful driver—otherwise he might lose his job. But the private motorist has nothing to lose but his life.

One Small Nation's Policy

TO THE ARGUMENT that nations lacking natural resources are doomed to poverty unless they go out and take them from nations having them, a distinguished American scholar replies, "Look at Denmark."

That little country, competing for a living with big and wealthy neighbors, has no oil, coal, waterpower or minerals, hardly any timber and naturally poor soil. Yet Denmark has made herself prosperous and has today probably as high a standard of living as can be found anywhere.

How was this done? The Danes faced realities intelligently and used their soil for what it was capable of — that is, dairying and poultry-raising. The people and government fostered these pursuits scientifically and found near at hand rich markets for their products. They also built and sold fine motorships and other things calling for intelligent application. The result is prosperity, contentment and happiness.

According to astronomers, Mars is moving along in a fog—and the Mars observers may be noting a similar condition in this direction.

Reversion In Africa

AMERICANS may note with interest a statement that Africa is being given back to the animals. F. A. Smyth, who operates an American travel service in Cairo, says buffalo are increasing so rapidly now that they are becoming a nuisance in some parts of the continent.

Many other species of wild beasts, whose extermination has been feared, are becoming more numerous. Elephants are so plentiful now in Uganda that last year the authorities allowed 1,500 of them to be killed. Hippopotami are multiplying until they are beginning to damage the planter's fields.

In view of what man has done to most of the continents, it seems only fair to give the animals a chance to show what they can do in what is called, rather quaintly, the "Dark Continent."

Looking forward to a "fireside chat" brings the disturbing thought that the coal-buying season is just around the corner.

Jail Route Immigrants

A PUERTO RICAN custom of some years' standing has been for young men to raid and destroy mail boxes as a means of getting into the United States. This being a serious federal offense, the government would sentence the culprits to three years' imprisonment in the Atlanta penitentiary. During their imprisonment they would learn the language; and being American citizens, they could remain in the country when released.

Now those malefactors are being foiled by being sent to their own island jails. Here is at least a hint that a lot of people born in this country might show more appreciation of their blessings.

That nine-day coast to coast sight-seeing motor trip taken by an Eastern schoolgirl and her chum, probably offered opportunity for such comments as: "That's a nice town we're coming to—wasn't it?"

According to a London doctor, "Only the anticipation of the joys of summer keeps mankind going through the winter"—but what about the folks that like winter better?

J. C. Penney, successful merchandiser, says the secret of success is "Work"—and it might be worth trying sometime, if everything else fails.

It seems odd that grown-up men should take their golf so much more seriously than boys used to take their "shinny."

Among the hardships of a dignified man is the requirement that he wear a coat on a hot day.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — The last war ended before the U. S. really felt the regimentation that must be imposed if a nation throws its whole weight against an enemy. But the machinery is already being put together to put the country into its next war far more expeditiously than before.

For 11 months after the United States entered the war in 1917, all was confusion. The navy was bidding against the army and both were bidding against the allies who were desperate for supplies they had been buying here rather free-handedly before we entered.

Then came the war industries board headed by a tall, energetic New York financier already so rich that profiteering could not appeal to him. He was Bernard Baruch. He brought order out of chaos and congress recognized it with a decoration.

Another Is Named.

NOW the government has picked another man, even younger than Baruch in his war days, to head the war industries administration when we tangle with our next enemy. He is Edward R. Stettinius, 39-year-old chairman of the United States Steel corporation.

When the next war comes, he will be, next to the commander of the military forces and the president, the most important man in America.

Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, said Stettinius will have even more authority than Baruch had.

Baruch could stop an industry in its tracks if he felt it was not cooperating, or if he considered it not essential to winning the war.

As one gesture it was planned to put the whole country into a sort of uniform to save time and material.

What It Means.

"HAD the war gone on another year," said Baruch, "our whole civil population would have gradually emerged (as wardrobes and inventories became exhausted) in cheap but serviceable uniform. . . . Unnecessary trim in clothing would have disappeared. Steel had already been taken out of women's corsets."

Shoes were to be streamlined.

"No one who did not have a card of the war industries board in his window could sell shoes," says Baruch, "and only the standardized shoes could be sold. . . . The shoes were to be stamped class A, B, or C, and had to be of a quality prescribed and sold at a price fixed. . . . Through restrictions on his labor, money, raw materials and transportation, no manufacturer would have been permitted to sell to any dealer violating the regulations. The armistice stopped execution of the plan."

But just to show what it means, Baruch says:

"Once unity is attained, experience has shown beyond question that the mobilized industry of America is a weapon of offense or defense far more potent than anything the world has ever seen—more terrible, I think, than the mind of any man has ever imagined."

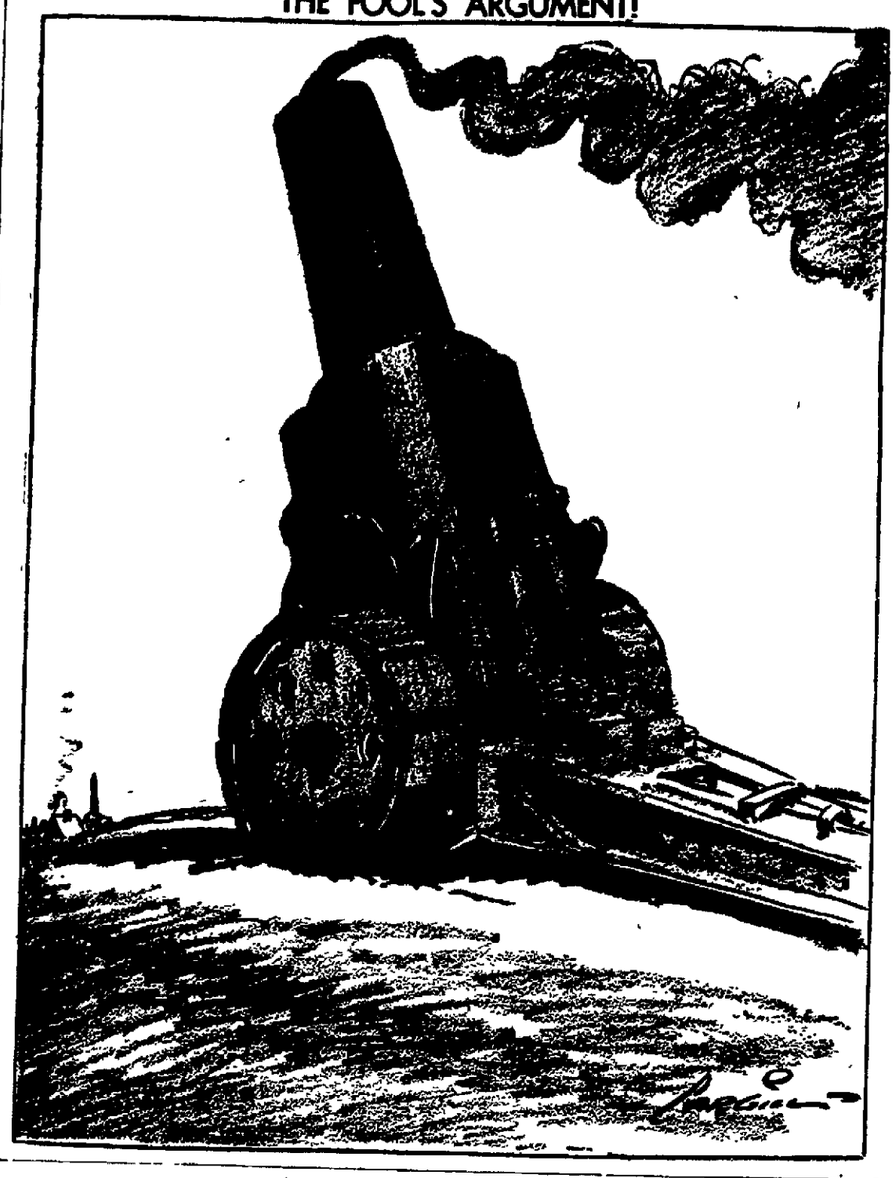
THE FOOL'S ARGUMENT!



Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Not long ago a United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted one-fifth of the profits of the motion picture "Dishonored Lady" to Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon whose play was unintentionally plagiarized by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The Magistrate said his decision was influenced by testimony of film distributors, who believed that the names of the stars, Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery, plus the prestige of the producing company, had more to do with the film's success than the story material.

We can not cavil with Judge Learned Hand on this decision, being no student of law, but we should like respectfully to point out the variance of opinion between the film distributors and the film exhibitors, who obviously do not see eye to eye with Hollywood on the appeal of Hollywood's star players.

ONLY a year or so ago exhibitors were denouncing Miss Crawford and other high-bracket wage earners in Hollywood as "fading" stars whose names were "death" at the box office. This complaint was published in trade journals in the form of full-page statements and directed against the Hollywood system of forcing certain pictures on exhibitors at costs not in keeping with their box-office value. This system, the exhibitors said, compelled them to pay exorbitant fees for pictures whose stars were "passe." Unless a revision of the system was brought about, many exhibitors would be forced to the wall.

Practically every high-salaried player in Hollywood was named in this complaint, and the producers, as well as the stars, were considerably embarrassed and hard put to defend themselves.

Now that the case of Miss Barnes and Mr. Sheldon has reached a decision in the courts, there is a disposition in some quarters to confuse the distributors with the exhibitors. Exhibitors, except in the cases of the big chain theaters, are the little guys who operate theaters and have to take what Hollywood sends them. Distributors are sectional clearing-houses for the film companies themselves. They run the exchanges, and see to the needs of the exhibitors in their immediate territories.

THE best story on exhibitors we've read is an account in Variety telling of a former exhibitor, now in prison, who has been put in charge of motion pictures in that prison. In the world of films behind bars, he is absolute czar. He has set up his own rules, one of which is that spectators (convicts) may not laugh at cops in embarrassing situations. For instance, if a cop shoots at a thug and misses him once, or twice, you can't laugh. But if the cop misses a third time, then the convicts may howl their heads off.

Not long ago circulars were sent to exhibitors by a major film company, asking comment on drawing power and audience response to their pictures. One of these reached the imprisoned czar, who promptly wrote back a glowing testimonial. In effect, he said, "Business is tremendous. I tell the warden what we are showing; he pushes a button and presto! Full house!"

Listen, World!

Edith Cavell—What Was Her Secret?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHE must hurry. It was coming so quickly now.

Only a few minutes left—seconds maybe—before she'd hear the marching feet. . .sense the massed guns within the black, walled space and feel their focus on her lifted face.

And then, perhaps—the dawn?

She quivered; pushed the thought away. No time to wonder now. She'd done the thing deliberately—knowing the risk. Freed men from horror as gladly as she'd freed them from pain . . . seeing it all as one service. A nurse couldn't take sides with Hate. Life and Love were greater than national barbains or boundaries.

"Patriotism isn't enough; one must have no hatred or bitterness for anyone." She'd said that and lived it—now she must pay the price. Half the world was pleading that she might be spared, battering Berlin with their frantic prayers.

But she wasn't pleading. All that was over. Only one thing remained — to send some word to those who would be left; some word that would help them understand, make them see death needn't really matter, that there was Something which would see them through both Life and Death, if they had the courage to take it. But where were the words, in this brief interval? Ah! that was it! Bending she began to write . . . faster . . . faster.

"Sad . . . this good-bye. I remember . . . I had wished . . . Forgive me . . . I hope you'll not forget the little talks we had. I told you that voluntary sacrifices would make you happy—that your idea of Duty toward God and yourselves would give you support in the sad moments of life; in the face of death. My fondest wishes for you all . . . my thanks."

She paused . . . a presence blacked the page. They'd come! So, rising quietly, she laid the note aside . . . passed through the door—

And died.

Edith Cavell—bravest heroine, most tragic victim of the World war. She nursed hundreds, regardless of their nationality; saved the lives of 200 other allied soldiers by helping them escape across Holland's neutral border. For this she was secretly imprisoned for weeks, tried, found guilty and hurriedly shot by a German firing squad.

Today the world worships her memory. Shortly, Herbert Wilcox will release a movie based on her heroic life . . . a movie which should draw us as to a shrine. And in London's Trafalgar Square there stands a statue to her memory, with one word carved above its quiet face — "HUMANITY!" Pausing, one wonders:

WHAT WAS THE SECRET OF THAT STRONG SERENITY? How did she do it? She was no super-mind or shining saint. She must have felt our common human fear, our common pride; have clung, as we all do, to life and love. Where did she find the strength to rise above that fear and put aside her cherished private plans?

Where do they all find it—those simple parents, shabby doctors, homeless priests, who spend their lives in service to the weak? What is the secret of their cheerfulness, their courage, their power and their peace?

Edith Cavell told that secret in one word—"SACRIFICE." Two thousand years ago another pointed the same way. He who wished to save his life, must lose it, Christ said. And these, His followers, prove He spoke the truth.

They are not foolish sentimentalists — crackpot fanatics—these selfless souls who die that others may live. They are the wisest people on earth. For they have exchanged their petty personal plans for a vast adventure. They have sacrificed individual life to become a part of all life. By daily dying many little deaths, they have freed themselves from the fear of all death and the bondage of all life.

THEY ARE NO LONGER PRIVATE PEOPLE. THEY ARE PARTNERS WITH GOD . . . AND SHARE HIS SHINING COMPENSATIONS.

Words of the Wise

He who accounts all things easy will have many difficulties.—Lao-Tsze.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One undercover development that played a very important role in convincing Washington authorities of the extreme gravity of the European crisis was the flood of foreign buying of U. S. stocks and bonds.

The day the president made his peace appeal to Hitler and President Moscicki of Poland, a large portion of the 1,300,000 shares traded on the New York stock exchange was European orders. The unexpected firm tone of the market throughout the crisis is attributed by Wall Street and SEC authorities largely to foreign buying.

How much money has been invested on this side in the past ten days is not definitely known, but experts estimate it to run into tens of millions of dollars.

Most of the orders have come from London and Amsterdam, with Paris and Brussels also sending a heavy volume. The buying has been chiefly in utility and industrial securities, with chemicals, textiles and aviation stocks favored.

Whether the stock exchanges are closed in the event of war depends entirely on what happens in the market. If there is heavy liquidation and a price crash appears imminent, it has been secretly decided that the SEC will immediately order a shutdown. If there is no panic the exchanges will not be disturbed.

Code Cables.

HOW heavy is the volume of the state department's confidential cables is indicated by the glow of flames flickering at night on the fourth floor of the old state department building.

On occasion the flames have been such as to alarm late-working clerks, especially because this floor contains the vital code section and some of the most important messages received from U. S. ambassadors.

Explanation of the flames is the practice of code workers to destroy all work sheets, etc., at the end of the day. This is to prevent possible leaks to anyone who might search waste-paper baskets. The practice started when the late Frank B. Kellogg was secretary of state, when the Mexican government came into possession of secret state department documents.

Ordinarily the burning of these papers is a trivial matter which takes place in a large open fireplace, and is noticed by no one. The fact that the flames now attract attention indicates the increased volume of confidential dispatches arriving from Europe and Asia.

Department Ghosts.

THE tense situation in Europe is playing hob with the nerves of late-working clerks and officials of the state department, several of whom have been scared out of their wits by the sudden appearance of a grotesque black and red object bobbing about and leering in the window.

The ensuing shrieks have brought members of the guard, who patiently explain it is nothing but a bunch of gas-filled toy balloons, attached to a string, with which a solemn colored laborer parades about the building at dusk, scaring off pigeons and starlings that roost among the many nooks and crannies of the rambling old building.

The clerks, however, have had their revenge. Several times the "Balloon Barrage" has been "shot down" by well directed paper clips, propelled by husky government rubber bands, and fired from the windows of the building.

Tough John.

JOHN ROGGE, forthright young assistant attorney general in Louisiana, may be a good Democrat, but certain other Democrats don't think so. They are having a tough time making him listen to political expediency.

The other day one of them, Freeman W. Burford of the East Texas Refining company, called Rogge on the long distance telephone from Dallas. Burford had been indicted in connection with a hot oil deal which also involved ex-Governor Leche of Louisiana, but had refused to go from Texas to Louisiana to surrender, and Federal Judge Davidson of Texas had upheld him.

So, calling Rogge in New Orleans, Burford said:

"I want you to know, Mr. Rogge, that I'm a good Democrat. I'm for Roosevelt for a third term, and just the other day I helped the Young Democrats in their move for a third term. You and I have a lot of things in common, so let's talk this thing over. I believe I can help you on this case."

"I'll be glad to talk to you," replied Rogge, "but first it's up to you to come in here and surrender."

Burford talked at great length—30 minutes worth of long distance tolls—but Rogge's reply was: "It's up to you to come in and surrender. If not, you're a traveling man, Mr. Burford, and we're bound to pick you up the minute you set your foot outside of Texas."

And that was that. Third term or no third term, Burford has to make up his mind whether to surrender.

Note—It is almost unprecedented for a judge to refuse removal motion on a criminal indictment, but Judge Davidson, a Roosevelt appointee, criticized the Louisiana grand jury for lack of impartiality and said: "I fear that the time will not soon arrive when graft will be suppressed in Louisiana so long as rubber-stamp men hold the seal of the state and put an O. K. on the crooks that happen to be over and above them."

Edison's Wax Record.

PART of the modernizing of the navy department performed by Acting Secretary Charles Edison consisted of installing dictating machines, of the type invented by his father, the late Thomas A. Edison.

As a further aid to efficiency, the machines in Mr. Edison's private office are operated by remote control. In other words, while he dictates his letters into the mouthpiece, the machine which records his words on the wax cylinder is located in an adjoining room, where his efficient stenographer, Mrs. McDermott, can transcribe the discs as soon as he has finished talking.

Digging Potatoes

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MANY potato fields are brown now, with foliage that has withered some weeks ago. In low places the new growth of weeds and grass has taken possession, while on the hills the faded stalks are almost completely gone and the light brown clay is bare.

I saw a farmer digging in his mammoth patch with a two-row digger pulled by a caterpillar tractor. One man operated this, while another sat upon the digger seat regulating it to the proper depth. When the outfit came up to the highway and turned around, I watched the rodlike elevators raise the sail, the stems and the potatoes. As the load moved upward, the crumbly soil fell through and large clods, fine white potatoes, stalks and weeds fell down upon the moistened upturned soil the digger had made.

There were no deep furrows left, and the fresh white-skinned cobblers laying thick upon the level soil, made the drab, faded surface appear strangely fruitful. Ten men with wire pails followed the machine stooping constantly to pick up the spuds, which they carried and dumped into a truck with a low, wide bed. Day after day this task is repeated until more than a hundred acres are harvested. Potato raising is this man's business.

Up along the hillside, near the graveled road, he built a long, spacious cave, and covered it with earth. When the grader has separated the fancy potatoes from the smaller ones, and those affected by scab or bruised are sorted out by hand, the storage bins beneath the hill will receive the best fruit of the field. Several thousand bushels can be stored to be delivered according to the rise and fall of prices in the market.

WHEN I came home that afternoon, I saw my neighbor plowing out his crop with a team hitched to a big, single shovel plow. He dangled at the handles in the rear, while the fickle shovel kept him guessing which direction it might shift the next instant. I knew so well the difficulties he encountered for his team either moved too fast or stopped and turned about to nip some tempting grass or weed.

When I looked down along the quick, wavy mark he made the harvest did not seem abundant. Many of the larger spuds were pushed out beneath the dirt. The one who picks them up will have to kick and scratch in the loose soil to find full measure of the meagre crop.

Boys, Birds and Guns.

Editor News-Journal

In our yard are four baby wrens, dying of starvation. A boy with a gun just had to shoot something and our mother wren was the victim.

When the birds were ready for breakfast this morning, no one came with a nice juicy bug, so they decided to get out of their box and call for Mother—but it was in vain, for their mother was dead.

We lost a wonderful little friend when Jenny Wren was shot. She had lived in our yard since spring, keeping our garden free from bugs and worms. Besides working for us in that way, she raised two nests of babies for us to enjoy.

The first three grew up very well but the last four are dying because they have no mother to feed them.

There are a good many boys right here in my neighborhood who have guns to shoot sparrows, but not one of them knows a thrush, ground bird or wren from a sparrow.

If parents insist on buying guns for their children why not require them to teach children the difference in birds—if the parents know.

WAR OR PEACE UP TO HITLER, PREMIER SAYS

Chamberlain Declares British Sticking to Polish Pledge of Armed Assistance.

the house "I cannot say that the danger of war has receded since the house met last Thursday."

Cheers greeted his declaration that "there has been no change in the policy of the government," which has been to stand firmly by Poland in the event of aggression.

"It is more than necessary to urge the press to exercise the utmost restraint," Chamberlain said.

An alleged verbatim quotation of the British note to Adolf Hitler published today, Chamberlain said, "is an invention from beginning to end."

Calls It 'Final Answer.'

"Our final answer," Chamberlain said, was handled to Hitler last night by Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson.

He indicated there would be no immediate publication of the momentous diplomatic exchange on which the peace of Europe apparently depends.

"We have made it plain that our obligations to Poland will be carried out," he said in measured tones. A roar of approval rose from the house.

"At this moment the position is that we are awaiting Hitler's reply," he continued.

Relating briefly a part of the diplomatic maneuvers on which the eyes of the world have been anxiously centered, Chamberlain said:

"On (Friday) the day after the House adjourned we received information that Hitler had asked the British ambassador in Berlin to call on him that day.

"In the course of the afternoon, we are told that Hitler had suggested that it would be a good thing if the ambassador flew home to give extended account of his conversation with Hitler.

"On Saturday, Sir Nevile Henderson arrived by plane from Berlin and we understood from him that in Berlin it was not considered to be necessary that he should go back the same day as the German government were anxious that we should give careful study to the communication he had to make to us.

"The cabinet devoted the whole of Saturday and Sunday to very careful, exhaustive and thorough consideration of the document brought by Sir Nevile and of the reply they proposed to send back."

The prime minister said Hitler left the British government in "no doubt as to his views of the urgency of settling the German-Polish question."

He added he would be glad if he could disclose the fullest information as to the contents of the communications exchanged with Hitler but said "in a situation of such extreme delicacy, when issues so grave hang precaiously in the balance, it is not, in the public interest to publish them."

Britain, he said would "naturally welcome" an opportunity of discussing with Germany the issues of a settlement that would find a place in a lasting agreement.

But, he made clear, the outcome hinges entirely upon the manner in which the immediate differences between Poland and Germany could be handled.

These differences, he declared, the government "more than once" had said "should be capable of solution by peaceful means."

"The first requisite, if there is to be any chance of useful discussion, is that tension created by frontier clashes and reports of incidents on both sides of the border should be diminished," he said.

Fighting Fleet Ready.

"The whole of our fighting fleet is ready at a moment's notice to take war dispositions," he said. "Air defense has been placed in a state of instant readiness," he added:

"The British government would hope that if an equitable settlement of Polish-German differences could be reached by free negotiation, that this might lead on to a wider agreement which would accrue to the lasting benefit of Europe and the world at large."

Britain now is waiting for Hitler's reply, he said, and "on the nature of that reply depends whether further time should be given for exploration of the situation and for the operation of the many forces which are working for peace."

Lauding "the remarkable calm" of the British people, Chamberlain noted that a period of waiting often is very trying.

The explanation of British calm, he said, was "first, that none has any doubt as to where our duty lies," and "secondly, we are ready for any eventuality."

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, addressing the house of lords, expressed similar convictions, saying "the position, remains one of great anxiety and danger but hope must not be finally abandoned; there is still hope that reason may prevail."

Ready on All Fronts.

Recounting Britain's preparedness in broad outline, Chamberlain asserted the nation is ready on every front—for war, if war should come.

Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the labor opposition, said "on these issues, we are adamant and immovable. The door is still ajar. I hope it will remain ajar until it closes against the angel of death and the menace of aggression. No nation in Europe would make war except one."

Greenwood urged immediate evacuation of London and other populous centers, saying:

"Suppose the storm broke on Saturday? It might be two, three or four days before evacuation could take place to the extent visualized.

"Unless we evacuate now, the responsibility for the deaths which are caused will lie on that side of the house (the government) and not upon us."

"Rehearsals are not enough," he declared.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, speaking for the liberal opposition, said:

"At this moment, I agree with his majesty's government that they should have the solid support of all peace loving people in this country.

"The last word rests with Herr Hitler."

Mud And Cavalry Poland's Twin Hopes If War Comes

A regiment of Poland's crack cavalry marches along a Polish road during maneuvers. It is said that Poland's twin hopes in event of war with Germany will be her mud, to bog down Hitler's mechanized army, and her cavalry, to maneuver over her vast plains. Poland's army, rich in men, is lacking in mechanized forces, despite Franco-British help in artillery and air force material and personnel.

WINDS UP TWO ROAD PROJECTS

County Resurfacing Program and Grading Job Will Be Finished This Week.

Two of the county's federal aid road projects, involving more than a half million dollars, are scheduled for completion this week, County Engineer Howard C. Sword said today.

Due to be finished first is the $69,000 PWA resurfacing project started early in the summer. Workmen were resurfacing the Winterstine road in Perry and Jefferson townships today and then will move to Monroe township, completing the entire job about Thursday, the engineer said.

Also nearing completion is the county-wide WPA road grading project which has provided jobs for hundreds of WPA workers for about two years.

Sword said the main grading project would be finished by the last of this week, but a few supplementary jobs probably will keep the workmen busy for three more weeks.

Under the PWA resurfacing project, about 94 miles of secondary roads will be treated with stone and asphalt. The project, which is in charge of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, is the first PWA road project in the county.

IT'S 'EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF IN HORSE TRADE,' FARMERS TOLD

Holding to the old theory that it's "every man for himself in a horse trade," Prosecutor G. W. Marriott and Sheriff E. P. Long said today that several farmers south of Mansfield who complained of being "gypped" in recent horse deals probably were "just out of luck."

After investigating two of the complaints, the prosecutor said he was convinced that there was no grounds for action against two horse dealers who were said to have refused to return down payments on horses when the deals were cooled off.

One of the complaining farmers, whose name was not available, told authorities he paid $10 down on a team of horses and agreed to get a government loan to pay the balance of the $150 purchase price.

Unable to obtain the loan, he said he asked the horse dealer for his money back and was refused. He was told that the horses had been sold to another buyer, he related to officials.

"The other buyer just beat him to the deal," the sheriff commented.

Marriott said a second farmer complained that he had paid $5 down on a horse and was unable to get the money back after he called off the deal because the animal had a growth on its neck. The dealer told him the sale was legal and he had a right to keep the down payment, the farmer told authorities.

The prosecutor added that two agents said to be representing a Cincinnati firm had been operating south of Mansfield where they keep five or six horses with which to make their deals.

keep going as long as their fleet remained Europe's premier sea power. And the consensus of the experts in that Nazi bombing planes or submarines could not destroy or cripple British dreadnoughts.

One veteran naval observer says the only way big British or French battleships could be destroyed from the air would be to "anchor them at one place for several days and to lock up their anti-aircraft gunners."

Aviation bombardment could do heavy damage also to French industrial cities, transportation centers and arteries, but it couldn't knock out enough strategic highways and railroads to render impotent France's steel fortresses and large, well-trained army.

Even with Italy's air forces augmenting German squadrons, military men believe the odds still would run heavy against speedy smashing of the British-French combination.

Lightning war, they say, still is a theory, not a fact.

Most experts will tell you it still takes infantry to seize and hold a position in the Spanish and Sino-Japanese wars, as well as the World war, 80 per cent of the casualties were inflicted by the artillery. Infantry and artillery don't move like lightning.

Huges squadrons of mechanized forces are largely post-World war products. They've never been used in a large scale modern conflict.

The Italians tried them, so the grapevine says, in their recent Po valley maneuvers. The results, it is said, were disappointing.

Franco's superior air forces failed notably to achieve quick victory in Spain. But the nationalist's cavalry made a far superior showing to the tanks on both sides.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — (AP) — Women tourists no longer may wear shorts in Monterrey, Mexico.

Ashlander, 82, Hit In Back As Boys Shoot At Rabbit

ASHLAND—Accidentally shot last night by two Ashland youths, William Tracy, 82, was in Samaritan hospital today with a .22 caliber bullet in his back.

Tracy was wounded while walking along a vacant lot near the Eagle Rubber company about 9 p. m. by two youths who said they were shooting rabbits, police reported. The boys gave their names as Bill Thomas, 15, and Gene Dettesfson, 14, both of Ashland. Thomas was handling the gun at the time.

Tracy's condition was reported as "fair" by hospital attendants. Physicians were to take x-ray pictures in an effort to find the exact location of the bullet.

The boys are not being held by authorities. Probate Judge S. H. Boffenmyer said that from what he has learned of the case, the shooting was accidental. Police Chief Herman D. Fletcher said he will wait to see if Tracy recovers before he takes any action.
